SOLDIERS IN KHAKI STORM SOCIALIST MEETING IN GARDEN

Hammer at Doors Till Mounted Police Force Retreat by Riding 20 Abreast Into Throng.

Meeting Refrains from Showing Red Flag, but Scarlet Banners Appear in Audience.

NINE SOCIALISTS ARRESTED

Men with Red Decorations Beaten in Streets by Soldiers—Speakers Stick to Mild Texts.

The heavy police guard around Madison Square Garden last night saved the Socialist mass meeting inside from being attacked by a crowd of about 500 soldiers, sailors, and marines who were hastily recruited about Madison Square, in Fifth Avenue and in Broadway by the report that the American flag was being insulted by Socialists.

After the police had dispersed the soldiers and sailors several times, they returned at about 9.30 in their full strength, bore down the policemen on foot on the Twenty-sixth Street side of the Garden, and began to hammer the doors, while the Socialists inside were cheering messages of congratulation to be sent to the Socialists of Germany and exhortations to the Socialists of this country to prove themselves worthy of the Socialists of the old world by bringing on a revolution here.

Being unwilling to use their clubs on men in uniform, the foot policemen were at a disadvantage, and the doors would have been smashed were it not that at the critical moment twenty-two mounted policemen, who had been kept in readiness in the basement of the Garden came out, clattered down the sidewalk, and gradually pushed the men in war service uniforms back westward to Madison Avenue.

Had the attacking forces made the breach in Madison Square Garden at the point they assailed they would have found themselves in a maze of staircases, offices, and anterooms, and would have had considerable difficulty in penetrating to the meeting itself. Most of the men in uniform were from other cities and did not know the plan of the Garden. As it was, the attack occurred at a point so far from the assembly hall that the Socialists inside, whose ears were pretty well occupied with noise of their own making, did not even know of the effort to storm the meeting.

Red Flags Dropped.

The meeting itself was nervous and panicky from the beginning, the crowd which occupied the main floor and all the galleries being on their feet with excitement every few minutes. Most of the spasms of excitement and alarm which swept over the crowd were for no discoverable cause, but occasionally they were because a red flag or a red shirt was furtively dropped from one of the galleries by an adventurous young Socialist, who tried immediately to lose himself in a seething and cheering crowd.

On three occasions when the red flag was dropped from the gallery or hung over a gallery rail, policemen, members of the Police Reserve, and soldiers and sailors plunged through the audience to the spot, while the whole meeting in a mixed demonstration of congratulation for the hardy Socialist color sergeant who had sneaked a banner into view and then fled, and disapproval for those who were trying to seek him out.

On one other occasion two young women and two men unfurled over the railing a red banner which contained in white letters an appeal for the liberation of Thomas Mooney, who was the subject to a large part of the speechmaking. The banner was taken away from them and the two men were arrested, while the young women addressed the audience in shrill voices, and called for a display of Socialist manhood, until Scott Nearing and others on the platform pleaded with them to let the meeting proceed.

No official attempt was made to hoist the forbidden banner, and the Socialist leaders who had charge of the meeting discouraged the flag-wagging element vigorously. A large part of the words of the speakers failed to reach the ears of their audience because of the semi-uproar which continued through most of the evening. These speakers were limited to fifteen minutes each, and the encroachments on their time caused outspoken disgust on the part of some of them. Scott Nearing, who presided, begged repeatedly for order, and announced that genuine Socialists who were engaging in the disturbance must be aware that they were injuring the cause which was so dear to them.

Nine Socialists Arrested.

A total of nine persons were arrested in the meeting for violating Mayor Hylan's order against display of the red banner and will be charged with disturbing the peace and attempting to incite a riot.

While red banners appeared, only to disappear in a few seconds, there was three or four times as much red on display as at ordinary Socialist rallies. Several hundred women at the meeting

Mme. Schwimmer Is Appointed Hungary's Envoy to the Swiss

BERNE, Nov. 25.—The Hungarian Government has appointed as Ambassador to this country Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, the writer and pacifist, who resides in Switzerland.

Mme. Schwimmer has accepted the nomination and will soon enter upon her duties here. She is the first woman to be appointed as an Ambassador.

Mme. Schwimmer, who is President of the Hungarian Woman Suffrage Association, has been credited with being the originator of the Ford peace ship idea and she was one of the prominent figures of that peace mission.

CHILE AND PERU BREAK RELATIONS

Both Governments Recall Consuls After Riotous Outbreaks.

DISTURBANCES ARE GENERAL

Disagreement Over Border Provinces Involves Bolivia—Crowds at High Tension.

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 25.—It is officially announced that Peru has withdrawn her Consuls from Chile as a result of the renewal of anti-Peruvian rioting in Iquique and Antofagasta.

Peruvian newspapers assert that if the demonstrations in Chile continue, anti-Chilean outbreaks may be expected in Peru. The demonstrations grow out of the differences between Chile on one side and Peru and Bolivia on the other concerning the border provinces of Tacna and Arica.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 25.—The Chilean Government has decided to withdraw its Consuls in Peru in order to avoid untoward incidents which might take place in case of outbreaks in Peru against Chile.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 25.—The Peruvian Legation here today received the following dispatch from the Peruvian Minister of Foreign Affairs:

"After the extraordinary outrages at Iquique Saturday, during which the property of several Peruvians was sacked, Chilean crowds on Sunday attacked the Peruvian Consul at Iquique, Señor L. Hosa, while he was on his way to the Mayor to protest against the riots. He was carried by force aboard a small steamer anchored in the port. The authorities and the police consented to the outrage and notified the Consul that they would not permit him to disembark. Upon receiving this notice the Peruvian Government has withdrawn its Consul as representatives from Chile."

News dispatches received here indicate that disturbances are general in Iquique, Antofagasta, and Pisagua, and that several Peruvian commercial houses have been wrecked in Pisagua.

A special dispatch to La Razon from Santiago says:

"The Government has received dispatches from Iquique confirming the reports that the entire Province of Antofagasta is in a state of agitation against the Peruvians. The arrival of two steamers at the Port of Antofagasta from Callao with many Chilean families aboard, who were seeking refuge from Lima, caused the report to be spread that they had been expelled from Peru. Crowds immediately organized great demonstrations against the Peruvians and in spite of the efforts of the police took possession of several commercial houses and Peruvian club...

"Apparently the disturbances still continue. The Peruvian Consul at Iquique has left for Lima.

MINE-SWEEPERS SAIL FOR GERMAN BASES

Allies Will Insist Upon the Surrender of Another Dreadnought and Destroyer.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A fleet of mine sweepers left the Firth of Forth this morning on their way to Kiel and Wilhelmshaven to clear the channels and disarm the remnants of the German Navy. It consists of the Hunt class of sweepers, and comprises the Musketry, (flagship,) Cottesmore, Cotswold, Pytchley, Holderness, Tamworth, Garts, and Maythorp.

The vessels will proceed to Copenhagen and will make a passage through Elsinore Sound and the Baltic to Kiel Bay for the bigger ships, which will follow later in the week.

The latter forces will consist of the battleship Hercules and ten destroyers, and it will be the duty of Admiral Montague E. Browning, who will be in command, to ascertain if the remaining German vessels at the bases of Kiel and Wilhelmhaven are properly disarmed.

A tenth German dreadnought remains to be turned over by Germany, and another destroyer has been demanded in place of the one which was sunk by a mine on the passage across the North Sea.

POWER TAKEN FROM EBERT

Soldiers' and Workmen's Council to Call Red Convention.

SOUTH GERMANS RESENTFUL

Bavaria, Wuerttemberg, and Baden Resist "Terrorism" of Berlin Dictatorship.

LIEBKNECHT ASSAILS ALLIES

Declares That Spartacus Government Need Not Bow to the Entente.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—An agreement between the German Soldiers' and Workmen's Council and the Ebert Government, by which power passes to the Council, has been proclaimed in Berlin. Dispatches received here show that this has intensified the separatist movement outside the German capital, and that the situation is drifting fast into general confusion.

The agreement provides:

"First—All political power is to be in the hands of the German Socialist Republic and the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council.

"Second—Their aim is to defend and develop what has been achieved by the revolution and to suppress all counter revolutionary activity.

"Third—Pending the election of representatives of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils to an Executive Council of the German Republic, the Executive Council in Berlin is to exercise its functions.

"Fourth—The appointment and dismissal of all members of the various legislative bodies of the republic, and, until the final Constitution is established, of Prussia, are to be made by the Central Executive Council, which also has the right of control.

"Fifth—Before the Cabinet appoints Assistant Ministers the Executive Council must be consulted.

"Sixth—A convention of Deputies drawn from the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils is to be summoned as soon as possible."

Believe Ebert Shorn of Power.

The London newspapers regard this change as tantamount to the overthrow of the Ebert-Haase combination and the adoption, at least theoretically, of the existing Russian system.

The greater part of South Germany, including Württemberg, Baden, and Bavaria, has declared that it will not submit "to the terrorism of the dictators in Berlin who have replaced the Kaiser and militarism," the British Wireless Service announces. The formation of an independent republic in Northwestern Germany with Hamburg as the capital is an added complication. Even in Prussia, according to the reports, feeling against the Berlin Soldiers' and Workmen's Council is gaining ground.

The Neueste Nachrichten of Munich maintains that if the present rulers in Berlin are unable to establish the principles of a federated democracy and are unwilling that the authority in the empire shall be given to Germans appointed by a National Assembly, the rest of the empire should detach itself from Berlin and create a new independent government "in some place beyond the reach of the arbitrary action of a minority inclined to terrorism."

British Suspect Deception.

It is admitted that the German Councils have not yet developed the extravagances which led to disintegration and anarchy in Russia, most of the Councils not being dominated by the Bolshevist element so far. Nevertheless, The Daily Telegraph remarks that it is rather significant that Germany should have adopted, even as a stop-gap, a measure which was one of Lenine's original and most characteristic contributions to legislative doctrine.

The Daily Mail, while pointing out the analogy to the developments in Russia, suggests that the new step is a part of a "big bluff," aimed at persuading the Allies that the old Germany is defunct. The Daily Express also thinks that the menace of extremism is possibly being exaggerated for the purpose of impressing the Allies with the difficulties of the position.

German Fleet May Be Sunk to Avert Quarrels Over It

LONDON, Nov. 25.—After an inspection of the German battleships and cruisers held by the Entente and final settlement of their ownership by the Peace Conference, all the vessels probably will be sunk, as apparently there is no disposition on the part of the Entente to risk the controversies which would be likely in case of an attempted division of them.

Entente naval experts will inspect the German craft carefully, to learn whether they contain features unknown to the Entente.

The value of the vessels of the High Seas Fleet surrendered by Germany under the armistice is estimated at $180,000,000. This does not include the U-boats.

HARWICH, England, Nov. 24.—Lieutenant Fulcher, one of the two captured American officers brought here by the submarine cruiser Deutschland, the U-103, when she surrendered today, gave a graphic account of his adventures since the sinking in mid-Atlantic on Sept. 30 of the American cargo ship Ticonderoga, on which he served.

"The first few shots from the U-boat," he said, "badly wounded the Captain of the Ticonderoga, killed the gun crew, and set the ship afire. The decks were quickly littered with dead. A British cruiser opened fire, whereupon the U-boat submerged. We managed to get the fire extinguished and to lower the boats, but in the excitement and confusion most of the poor fellows aboard were drowned.

"The U-boat again attacked us, and we kept up fire until we realized that the ship was sinking and it was useless to continue. We then decided to surrender."

Although Lieutenant Fulcher was wounded and his thigh bone was exposed, he took a pillow slip and waved it in place of a white flag. The U-boat came alongside and he was taken aboard with another officer.

The commander of the submarine, holding a revolver in his hand, asked the Lieutenant where his chief gunner was.

"I told him all the gunners were killed," added Lieutenant Fulcher. "A member of the crew who knew German was on a raft at the time, but the commander ignored his plea for help. 'God will save him,' was all he said, and then left him to his fate.

"A doctor removed my blood-stained clothing and a drink of brandy was given to me. After I recovered a little I was closely interrogated. They asked questions about our convoy and about the Americans generally. I was specially asked why we in the United States call the Germans Huns.

"On the twelfth day after the sinking of the Ticonderoga we met a Norwegian ship bound from New York for Australia. The Germans captured her and transferred all her provisions to the U-boat. At 10 o'clock the next morning the ship was sunk. The Germans left the crew to their fate 1,000 miles from land.

"Two days afterward we sighted an English sailing ship. English cruisers came up, however, and we submerged. Shells from the English ships came so near us that we could feel the submarine tremble.

"Two days passed and an English ship was again encountered. This time one torpedo and eighty-three shots were fired at her, but she was not caught.

"On Oct. 25 all the U-boats were called back, and in twenty-five days we were at Kiel. I was there put aboard the Prince Henry, and was told a little later that if I liked I could have passage to England on the U-boat which captured me. We went to Heligoland to make up the flotilla and I arived at Harwich today. I am very glad to have come through so many adventures safely."

LONDON, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—Lieutenants Julius H. Fulcher of Frisco, N. C., and Frank L. Muller of Oakland, Cal., were the American officers surrendered here by the Deutschland.

MAY DROP BAKER AS ENVOY

Wilson Reluctant to Deplete Cabinet Too Much While He Is Away.

NEW MEMBER WOULD HEAD IT

War Secretary, It Is Said, Will Be Needed to Guide McAdoo's Successor.

PASSPORTS ARE ISSUED

And Plans May Be Told Today —Senators Unlikely to Send Committee to Paris.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—In the face of persistent reports that President Wilson had decided to postpone or abandon his projected trip to Europe on account of widespread opposition to his absence from the United States preparations for the journey continued at the White House and elsewhere today.

It is expected that the President's plans will be announced tomorrow or the next day. Passports were issued today by the Passport Bureau of the State Department to the President and Mrs. Wilson and the other members of the party that will accompany them on their trip. The names of the others of the party are withheld.

Late this afternoon the President had a conference with Secretary Baker in the latter's office in regard to arrangements for conducting Government affairs while the President is away. It was understood after the conference that the President felt that it would not be wise to have too many members of the Cabinet absent from Washington at the same time as the President, and for this reason there is to be a recasting of the personnel of the peace delegation. It is apparent that there will be fewer Cabinet officers on the delegation than was first intended.

The resignation of Secretary McAdoo from the Cabinet may make it necessary for Secretary Baker to remain in Washington part of the time while the President is in Europe. Secretary Lansing, who will be Chairman of the Peace Mission, is senior member of the Cabinet, and Mr. McAdoo as Secretary of the Treasury ranks next. Third in line of legal seniority comes the Secretary of War.

New Member Head of Cabinet.

It is the President's intention to nominate a successor to Mr. McAdoo before he sails, and the new Cabinet officer would be head of the Government under the rule of precedence established by law. Even with a man of as wide Washington experience as Representative Carter Glass of Virginia in Mr. McAdoo's place, (for the selection of Mr. Glass seems practically assured,) he would be lacking in knowledge of important matters with which Mr. Baker and other members of the Cabinet are familiar, and it is believed that as a result of the conversation between President Wilson and Secretary Baker this afternoon Mr. Baker will remain in Washington most of the time while the President is away.

This, however, does not remove one awkward feature, in the judgment of many public men, particularly members of the Senate. The awkwardness arises from the fact that with Mr. Lansing out of the country and Mr. McAdoo out of the Cabinet, the new Secretary of the Treasury would be the senior officer of the Government in Washington and as such would preside, nominally, at any rate, over Cabinet conferences that he may find it necessary to call to attend to important public matters which under normal circumstances would be attended to by the President as the only member of the Government in whom executive authority is vested by the Constitution.

Thus the paradox would be presented of the presiding member of the Cabinet being the junior member, and the anomalous condition produced of the newest member of the President's official family in charge of Government affairs while the President is away. But if Mr. Baker remains he will be the guide of his less experienced associate, and will be able to tell him the President's views in regard to important questions that may arise.

It is understood that as a result of the considerations above set forth the number of members of the Cabinet expected under the original plan to serve on the American peace delegation will be reduced. This means that the President must seek elsewhere to find men to fill the vacancy or vacancies in the delegation's personnel. The understanding that prevailed that Secretary Baker would be a member of the delegation was modified recently in view of indications that while Mr. Baker would accompany the President to Europe he would go in an advisory capacity and not as a peace plenipotentiary. Now a further modification is believed to be

German Specialist Denies Food Will Be Short; Says Readjustments Will Avert Trouble

LONDON, Nov. 25, (British Wireless Service.)—The Cologne Gazette of Nov. 16 published an article under the caption "Armistice and the Food Supply," written by a specialist named Oetershofen, who argued that there could be no question of a shortage of food in Germany, but that it was urgently necessary to reduce rations.

The writer maintained that Germany could deal with the transport problem by readjustments, reducing the transport of potatoes and vegetables, and confining the facilities to foods of greater nutritive value in proportion to their bulk. He advocated the killing of pigs in particular, the abolition of the rationing of sugar, and the restriction of railway consignments, for distances over 150 miles, to corn, sugar, live cattle, meat, fats, poultry, eggs, and cheese.

Oetershofen estimated the bread corn harvest, apart from barley and oats, at not less than 12,000,000 tons, and the potato harvest at about 47,500,000 tons. He pointed out that Germany must have an abundance of sugar, because most of the German sugar hitherto had been used as raw material for munitions, and Germany now had a sugar harvest of about 1,808,000 tons, as compared with a peace consumption of only 1,200,000 tons. The potato supply, he said, must also benefit from the fact that it was no longer necessary to extract spirits from potatoes for munitions.

"Even after the armistice," the writer said, "there is abundance of food in Germany for the population if we reduce the consumption by animals by reducing the stocks of cattle. It is to be expected that food prices will soon fall sharply. The public can contribute to this end if it will avoid hoarding of supplies and wait for cheaper prices."

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES, Nov. 24.—After the state entry of the King of the Belgians into Brussels and the last ceremony of the day, when in the yellowing twilight he passed through immense crowds in the Grand' Place to the Hôtel de Ville to receive an address from Burgomaster Max and the civic authorities, the people of Belgium's capital gave themselves up to a night of carnival which by bad luck I was unable to see.

It was a Flemish "Kermesse," in which rich and poor, nobles and peasants, high officers and simple soldiers were exalted to equality of rank in the brotherhood of joy. Erasmus would have found a new text for a book in Praise of Folly through this night in Brussels; for in this folly of the crowds there was the light-heartedness of children dancing to the love of life and the comradeship of humanity, of many nations linking arms across the frontiers of the spirit, and the laughter often of women who had tasted the salt of their own tears in four years of agony.

In the open squares of Brussels, below the white Palace of Justice which crowns the central hill of the city, the people danced all night. They clapped their hands and made fairy rings around English and Scottish, Belgian or French soldiers—any figure that stood for hero worship in their hearts—and whirled about them, cheering and singing.

It was a moonlit night, and these swirling crowds were in a white shadowy glamour as they pranced in squadrons down the broad avenues under the leafless trees and eddied through the streets of shops and restaurants, sparkling in electric light—the lights of peace, which the men who had been on the other side of the lines had never seen for four years, so that, like moths which had been in darkness, they went close into the fire of all this light, finding strange pleasure in its blinding glare, in its whirling signs, and in the advertisements that flashed out above the white, upturned faces.

All the Allies Represented in Crowds.

In these crowds were soldiers of all the Allies. It was an international night in Brussels and a festival of victory, for, besides those who came in for the royal procession—Americans, French, British, and Belgians—there moved about among the people thousands of men in queer black uniforms or in strange combinations of military and civil clothing, who tramped into Brussels from prison camps, liberated after captivity, where they had formed a comradeship in misery. They were Italians, Portuguese, Russians, English, Scottish, Irish, Welsh, Australians, and Canadians. They had been fed and housed by the Belgian people,

FOCH MAKES ENTRY INTO STRASBOURG

STRASBOURG, Nov. 25.—Marshal Foch, with Generals Guillaumat and Gouraud, entered Strasbourg at 1:30 P. M. today at the head of the French Army.

STRASBOURG, Nov. 24. — General Gouraud entered this city today at the head of the Fourth French Army amid the tremendous enthusiasm of 300,000 people. Never did an army have such a triumphal greeting.

"Such a spectacle repays all our sufferings," said General Gouraud, who issued a proclamation to the city, beginning with the words of "The Marseillaise": "The day of glory has come."

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The War Office announcement on the official entry of the French Army into Strasbourg says [presumably referring to Sunday]:

"Marshal Pétain, accompanied by General Castelnau, today made solemn entry into Strasbourg at the head of the troops of the army of General Gouraud. He was received with enthusiastic acclamations. As the French regiments marched into the noble Alsatian city, which was magnificently adorned with the national colors, the cry of "Vive la France!" was heard, often repeated. The entire people expressed their joy at being reunited with the motherland and affirmed the world the unshaken attachment of Alsace to France.

A Havas dispatch says that on the French front the troops continued their advance during the course of the day in Luxemburg, where they occupied Mersig, Bollen, Riedersheid, and Lemerie, and also in Lorraine, where the French are along the River Sauter.

French cavalry has entered Luxemburg.

GERMANS RETIRE LEISURELY.

Troops Moving Back from Our Front Do About as They Please.

AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—Most of the Germans in the retiring army, the retreat of which the Americans are following, have shown keen eagerness on reaching German soil to return to their homes immediately and engage again in their civilian occupations, according to reports.

A movement the other way by Alsatians and Lorrainers who have been in the German Army is in progress. Many of them have been released by the Germans or have got passes from soldiers and sailors' committees and have reached the American lines.

Not a great deal of discipline among the German troops moving along the roadways is reported. They are doing much as they please when the officers are not attempting to take severe measures because of the feeling of the men against them. There are instances of looting in various regions, according to accounts coming in, but most of these are individual cases where a soldier or two appropriates a farmer's chickens.

The German commanders continue to communicate with the Third Army by wireless, informing the Americans of the Germans' progress each day.

The wireless was interrupted at times on Sunday and the German command was unable to send a number of messages which it was eager to get into American hands. Two officers with a white flag crossed the bridge over the Moselle at Wasserbillig, therefore, carrying the messages. These were the last Germans to set foot in the line held by the Americans. The officers remained but a few moments, as they said they had a long way to travel to reach their regiments.

HOUSE FOUND OPPOSITION

Entente Statesmen Inclined Not to Accept Our Ideals Closely.

WANTED OWN SETTLEMENT

Held That America, Having Gained Her Aims in Victory, Should Draw Aside.

TOLD THEY WERE IN ERROR

Saw Force of Argument That, Without Just Peace, We Had Fought in Vain.

PARIS, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—The United States Government's immense diplomatic success in obtaining from the allied Governments acceptance of President Wilson's fourteen peace points, with only one reservation and addition, is becoming daily more apparent, as the preliminaries for the approaching peace Congress are being outlined largely on the basis of the President's points.

Colonel E. M. House, the special representative of the United States Government, when he arrived here, found little disposition among American and European friends to accept as a totality the framework of peace as expressed by President Wilson. Some European statesmen considered that the points had worked as a good solvent upon Germany, that they had served their great purpose in their effect upon German unity, but that they should not be observed too closely when it came to formulating the practical details of the settlement.

Allied statesmen plainly put forward the view that, as the American traditional policy had been one of detachment from European affairs, it was natural for the American Government when the war broke out in Europe to consider it a quarrel among European nations and to declare its neutrality.

It was pointed out that for two years and a half the American Government observed its neutrality and called the attention of both groups of belligerents to violations of sea law. Germany's offenses became intolerable, and America entered the war both for that reason and because America did have a community of ideals of Government and of human rights with the allies. America, as became a great country, was impelled to put forth great efforts, and she did.

As a European Quarrel.

Allied statesmen have fully appreciated the effect of American arms in winning the decision. Nevertheless, it was contended by some, this had been a controversy among European nations, and the winning group, it was suggested, supposed that America, having accomplished her aims, would return to her detachment and allow the countries intimately concerned to arrange a settlement according to the European viewpoint of the situation.

These statesmen made it plain that they would receive every friendly counsel the United States would offer, the more so because they knew that America wanted nothing in a material way for herself, but was interested only in realizing her ideals.

The losses the other belligerents have suffered in comparison with those of the United States have also been cited as a reason for the Allies having a predominant influence in shaping the new order in Europe.

These were some of the conceptions put forward by the allied Governments with much tenacity and skill, but always in a friendly spirit.

The contentions of the American Government were, generally and substantially, that it had come into the war, not alone on account of specific grievances against Germany, but on account also of certain fundamental principles of justice and right. These principles had been announced with fullness several times by the American Government and had resulted in a great effort by the American people.

Accepted as Ideals.

Looked at from Washington, these principles, each time they had been enunciated in part or in whole, had been received favorably by the European peoples and seemingly by the allied Governments. It was not meant to be understood that the American Government had thought the allied Governments had formally accepted them, but the attitude of the Ministers unofficially and of the press and of all subjects and outside the immediate administrations and of the peoples as a whole had caused the conviction to prevail in America that these principles had been approved and accepted as ideals on which the war was being prosecuted.

The American people had never been conscious that they were fighting for territorial or colonial interests of any Allied Government, excepting in so far as these came within the framework of the American Government's principles. Consequently it was necessary to bring out that these points, having been accepted by the Central Powers, presented a clean issue as to whether they were to be officially accepted by the Allied Powers. If the Allied Powers could not see their way clear to accept them, the American Government was in the position of having conducted the war for purposes which were not identical with those of the Allies.

This presented a rather delicate issue at the outset, as it was realized that it might require the submission of the entire subject to the American Congress. The European Ministers felt the force of the views presented, and this in time brought about an entire agreement upon the American points as a basis of peace negotiations.

FOCH SAYS "NO" TO GERMANS.

Will Make No Modification of the Terms of the Armistice.

PARIS, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—The conferences on the preliminaries of peace probably will be held in Paris instead of at Versailles owing to the superior accommodations and conveniences in the capital. Only the formal sessions at concluding stages will be held at Versailles. The Temps says the German mission which will take part in the preliminaries will not be quartered in Paris, but in the immediate vicinity of the city.

The only active sittings now going on are those of the Joint Armistice Commission, which holds daily sessions at Spa, the former German headquarters, but which is now held by the French. French, British, and German delegates attend the meetings. General Nudant represents Marshal Foch, with Commandant Sisterom as his assistant. General von Winterfeldt is the German military representative and Mathias Ersberger, who also was a member of the German armistice delegation, participates in most of the sessions.

Some of the meetings are described as having been very animated over the efforts of the Germans to secure modification of the terms of the armistice. Marshal Foch's reply was a refusal to consider a change, and a dispatch from Basle gives the text of the Marshal's reply, which says:

"No attention can be given to the demands presented in General von Winterfeldt's letter of Nov. 21."

The Joint Armistice Commission meeting appears to be in accordance with Clause 34 of the armistice, which admitted the principle of a permanent international armistice commission under the direction of the allied military and naval chiefs. While its duties are restricted to the execution of the armistice, it is one of the preliminaries which will merge later into the sessions of the Interallied Conference and the Peace Congress.

LONDON EAGER TO SEE WILSON

No Progress of Any Emperor Will Equal His, One Paper Says.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—"President Wilson will receive the greatest reception we ever gave any guest. No progress any Emperor ever made will equal his," says The Observer in an article discussing the coming visit of the President to England. It adds: "We rejoice that an event we have so urgently advocated is now assured."

The newspaper, discussing the question of the freedom of the seas, says: "There is a profound contrast between America, which is a solid Continental unit, and the British Empire, which is essentially a maritime system.

"Shipping and the naval means for guarding it correspond to the transcontinental railways which link the United States from ocean to ocean and to the internal police required for guarding them. If this one fundamental diversity between the positions of the two countries and their sources of life is grasped there can be no extreme difficulty in adjusting points of view on all matters."

SAYS THE PRESIDENT IS FACING A CRISIS

David Lawrence Declares Friends Want Mr. Wilson to Clean House.

OBJECT TO TRIP ABROAD

Creel, Cable Control, and McAdoo Resignation Also on Friends' List of "Colossal Blunders."

David Lawrence in yesterday's New York Evening Post.

[Reprinted by permission.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — President Wilson is himself so strong an advocate of frankness in public business and politics that he will not mistake the sincerity of purpose and disinterestedness of his many friends who believe that he is face to face with a crisis in his own career both as the leader of the Democratic party and the representative of America at the Peace Conference.

Briefly, there is a dissatisfaction and discontent inside the Democratic party of which the public has hitherto had no hint, but which, if left uncorrected by the President himself, will mean that as he goes to Europe he will leave behind a dejected and depressed following whose enthusiasm for him will have been seriously diminished.

Men who are not officeholders but unselfish friends of the President are grieved and disappointed. They are not Republicans, they are not his political foes, but they are the men who helped elect him in 1912 and in 1916, and they are talking earnestly among themselves about what can be done to make the President see that he must clean house, that he must reorganize his entire Cabinet, and that he must, indeed, reorganize the Democratic party in Congress so that he will have advisers in the executive branch of the Government and leaders in the legislative branch who are in sympathy with the true wishes and spirit of the American people.

See Mistakes by Wilson.

After talking with dozens of these men, the names of any one of whom, if published, would carry the conviction that they are seeking only things which will help and not hurt the President, one gets a consensus of opinion which is unmistakable. Here and there are suggestions of method which differ, here and there are different degrees of dissatisfaction, but, put categorically, these are some of the mistakes which the President himself is declared to have made or to be making today:

First, the President, in his absorption in foreign questions, has gotten out of touch with the true spirit of America on domestic questions. He has listened to a small group of advisers who have had his ear to the exclusion of the greater group of friends who come from the Middle West and West and sections of the East where people are finding it difficult to reconcile the brand of democracy which Mr. Wilson preached at the outset of his Administration with the retention of distinctly autocratic and bureaucratic advisers and with his own secretiveness.

Second, the friends of the President are unable to understand why George Creel should be taken to Europe as the head of any committee on public information when Mr. Creel, notwithstanding his fine personality and close personal friendship for the President and sympathy with the Wilson ideas, has lost the confidence of the American press, and thereby the people.

Third, the friends of Mr. Wilson believe a grave mistake was made in announcing the dispatch of Mr. Creel to Europe at the same time that Postmaster General Burleson was permitted to take over control of the Atlantic cables. These things have been denounced as "colossal blunders," not merely by Republicans, but by Mr. Wilson's most loyal friends, who mean nothing personal by it, either.

Cabinet in a Rut.

Fourth, they believe that Mr. Wilson's Cabinet is superannuated and in a rut, and that the resignation of William Gibbs McAdoo deprives the Administration of one of its most efficient public servants, and that the President should have never permitted him to resign until after reconstruction was well under way, or at least Mr. Wilson had returned from Europe.

Fifth, they consider that Southern domination in Congress and elsewhere will prove fatal to the Democratic party's chances to regain the confidence of Western electorates.

Sixth, they are deeply disappointed that Mr. Wilson himself should have kept himself aloof from men from various States who have sought to aid him in the past, and that he should have depended so much on his own judgment or the advice of a small group of provincially minded advisers.

Seventh, and most important of all, there is a deep-rooted feeling that Mr. Wilson has not taken account of the resentment of the American people for his failure to take into his councils on foreign affairs Republicans as well as Democrats. It is true that there are some Republicans who are not in sympathy with Mr. Wilson's ideas, but many Republicans would be if taken into the President's confidence.

Close friends of the President believe it is his duty, at least, to call into conference Republicans of all shades of opinion and lay before them the program he intends to pursue at the peace conference.

The last suggestion probably will not please the President, but the time is past when friends of Mr. Wilson out of mere respect for his likes and dislikes can afford to remain silent. One of the most curious features of the situation is that some of the men with whom I have talked do not feel that they can very well tell Mr. Wilson the truth. Some of them would be willing to tell him the truth about his loss of prestige in this country if he only gave them audience. Others would just as soon write him their views, and some have done so. But the majority of President Wilson's friends are talking among themselves of the necessity of bringing forcibly to Mr. Wilson's attention that he is drifting away from the original precepts of openness and managing the Government in a personal and private way which does not square with his professions of democracy.

Objects to European Trip.

Perhaps the most severe criticism heard is of Mr. Wilson's decision to go to Europe at this critical time. Nobody begrudges the President a great part in the settlement of the peace of the world, nor his remarkable influence in bringing victory to the Allies; but the feeling of the men who are fond of the President and who have the courage to tell correspondents how they feel is that he treated the American people with indifference when he failed in his first announcement to tell the exact purpose of his journey and the provision he planned to make for the transaction of public business in his absence.

The revolt inside the Democratic Party is not of recent origin. It has been growing for several months, and may explain the lukewarm activity of many Democratic National Committeemen in the recent election, many of whom felt a large part of the Republican criticism of the record of the Democratic Congress was absolutely true, and that it was useless to try to make the people think otherwise.

Mr. Wilson is considering the appointment of peace delegates. Some of the names mentioned have rankled in the minds of disinterested friends who want to see America represented by broad-minded and able men, instead of the same type of provincialism which has caused dissatisfaction throughout the country before. President Wilson may not know it, but the morale of his friends is at a low ebb. There is no one but himself on whom responsibility can be placed, and no one but himself who can restore the confidence of the people in him at a time when he must needs tell European statesmen, skilled in the bargaining methods of the Old World diplomats, that he speaks for a united America, which doesn't want to see selfishness supersede a spirit of justice at the peace table, and is particularly anxious that the sacrifices America has made shall not have been made in vain.

SEMENOFF DEFIES SIBERIAN DICTATOR

General Asserts Jurisdiction Over a Vast Territory and Cuts Wire Communications.

OMSK REBELS TO BE TRIED

Refugees from Bolshevist Terrorism Arrive Near Vladivostok in Terrible Condition.

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 22, (Associated Press.)—General Semenoff, who has been the anti-Bolshevist leader in the Trans-Baikal region, has interrupted wire communication between Omsk, the seat of the All-Russian Government, and Vladivostok. He asserts his jurisdiction over the Amur, Usuli, and Trans-Baikal district, and has established headquarters at Chita.

General Semenoff and Admiral Kolchak, the supreme head of the All-Russian Government, for some time have not been on friendly terms. Semenoff, however, is friendly toward General Horvath, one of Admiral Kolchak's strongest supporters.

The three Cossack officers who on Nov. 18 arrested two members of the All-Russian Directorate, Avskentieff and Zenzinoff, and two prominent citizens of Omsk, Argunoff and Rogovsky, precipiating the change in the All-Russian Government which made Admiral Kolchak dictator, will be tried by court-martial.

Premier Vologodsky in a manifesto declares that the officers were Colonel Valneov, Commander of a Siberian division; Commander Katanaev of the Ermak Cossack regiment and Commander Krasilnokov of a volunteer unit. It is charged that the men "attempted to prevent the supreme power from functioning and arrested the President of the Russian Government." The court-martial will be held in accordance with procedure on the fighting front, the sentence to be confirmed by the supreme ruler.

Half dead from starvation and disease, many beyond help, 1,321 survivors out of the original total of 2,100 Bolshevist prisoners and refugees in a train sent across Siberia by the Czechoslovak troops fighting in Samara, European Russia, have arrived at Nikolsk, near Vladivostok. The journey from the Ural mountains to the Pacific coast occupied six weeks.

The survivors reached Nikolsk in forty cars. The train carried no provisions and was without sanitary equipment of any kind.

Of the 800 persons missing from the original total, some were shot while trying to escape from the train. Others lost their lives by throwing themselves from the car windows. Disease, starvation, and exposure accounted for the remainder. The American Red Cross at Vladivostok has rushed doctors to Nikolsk to aid the arrivals, who are in a terrible condition. Some persons died on the ground after being removed from the railroad cars.

Other trainloads of human freight in similar straits are now on their way eastward over the Trans-Siberian Railroad. Eight hundred persons, many of them sick or infected, were turned back toward Samara because of the lack of hospital space.

The American Red Cross is taking care of 500 of the survivors in an improvised hospital. These persons are dependent solely upon charity. The Russian authorities, co-operating with the Americans, are looking after 80 typhus cases and 100 other sick who have lodged in the Russian barracks.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Officials are pleased by General Semenoff's attitude, as reported from Vladivostok. He has been one of the most consistent workers for the elimination of Bolshevism and the re-establishment of a stable government in Russia since the overthrow of the Czar.

Semenoff was the first high officer in the East to take arms against the Bolsheviki. He has said repeatedly that he desired only to see a stable government established and that he did not want to be the head of such a government, though he would like to be at the head of the army of the new government.

It is thought probable that Admiral Kolchak, in assuming authority as dictator of the Omsk Government, declared himself head of the armed forces, as would be natural, and that offended Semenoff. Hope is felt that Semenoff's friendship for General Horvarth will overcome his antipathy for Kolchak and that this new danger to the peace of Siberia will be overcome.

ALLIED WARSHIPS TOUR BLACK SEA PORTS

Gen. Franchet d'Esperey, Commander of Army in Macedonia, Arrives in Constantinople.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Allied warships, the Bosporus having been cleared of mines, have entered the Black Sea and visited various ports from Varna around the southern coast to Novorossysk.

Dredging operations in the Bosporus were completed on Nov. 20. French and other allied warships were detached from the naval forces stationed at Constantinople and visited the Black Sea ports of Varna, Galata, Eregri, Samsun, Sinope, Trebizond, Batum, Poti, and Novorossysk.

General Franchet d'Esperey, commander of the victorious allied forces in Macedonia, arrived in Constantinople Saturday.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Ahmed Riza Bey, President of the Turkish Senate, is going to Paris and London to ascertain the attitude of Entente statesmen toward Turkey, according to a British correspondent at Constantinople quoted by the morning newspapers. Ahmed, the correspondent says, is one of the few Turkish statesmen whose record would inspire Entente confidence, and his influence extends considerably beyond his office.

Ahmed desires to obtain Franco-British guidance in reorganizing Turkey. He is quoted as saying that the new Sultan is capable of playing a useful part in the regeneration of his country within the limits of its Constitution and deserves the support of the Allies.

imminent, so that Mr. Baker can remain at home to look after affairs of Government while the President is absent, going to Europe to attend to problems connected with demobilization of the American Expeditionary Forces just before the President returns.

Question of Republican Delegate.

In considering the selection of peace plenipotentiaries President Wilson is represented as having proceeded along the lines of the policy that all except one of them should be members of his Cabinet, the one exception to be a prominent Republican as a recognition of the precedent established by President McKinley in appointing a Democrat, Judge George Gray of Delaware, to membership in the American delegation that negotiated a treaty of peace with Spain's plenipotentiaries after the Spanish-American war. The basis of this policy was that if the President appointed any outsider, except the prominent Republican to the peace delegation jealousies might be aroused among certain groups that believed they were entitled to recognition.

Thus the pressure for the appointment of a member of the Senate as a peace plenipotentiary was said to have been ineffective, although the suggestion was considered, because if a Democratic Senator were selected Republican Senators would insist that one of their number should be chosen, and it was felt that two Senators would swell the size of the peace mission to undesirable proportions. It is understood to have been the intention from the beginning to name only five plenipotentiaries. That was the number sent to Paris to negotiate the peace treaty with Spain.

Another suggestion said to have been considered was that Mr. Davis, the new Ambassador to Great Britain, should be a plenipotentiary. Rejection of this suggestion was due, it is claimed, to the consideration that Mr. Davis could not well be appointed without also naming Mr. Sharp, the Ambassador to France, and possibly Dr. Page, the Ambassador to Italy, which would make the delegation too large.

Subsequently, however, according to the understanding that prevails in Washington, it was determined, or practically determined, to appoint Colonel E. M. House, the President's friend and unofficial adviser, as a plenipotentiary.

Today's developments indicate that Mr. Lansing and possibly one more Cabinet officer will be peace plenipotentiaries. If Colonel House is to serve with them there will be left the appointment of two plenipotentiaries, one of whom will be the prominent Republican, but nothing has appeared to show who the new selections will be.

Congress will assemble for its regular constitutional session on Monday, Dec. 2. The President will deliver his annual address, it is expected, on the following day, and will sail from New York for Europe within three days thereafter. The greatest reticence is being observed among the officials who know his plans as to their details. The name of the passenger steamship that will carry the Presidential party has not been made known, but it is indicated that the George Washington, formerly of the North German Lloyd Company, has been chosen. This vessel will have a battleship for convoy.

Great preparations are being made for the reception of President Wilson in France and other countries that he is expected to visit are ready to give him a royal welcome. This has produced the suggestion that no proposal has come from any American source that a send-off be given to the President when he sails from the United States, and the argument is advanced that the absence of any arrangement to give the President a notable farewell is significant of the unpopularity of his European venture.

No announcement of the President's plans for departure has been made, however, and there is nothing to indicate, as far as the public knows, whether it will be possible to see the President at the port of embarkation. Even the name of the port is a secret, although it is generally understood in Washington that he will sail from New York.

Senators did not appear to believe tonight that any committee would be appointed by the Senate to attend the Peace Conference and report information to that body. There have been rumors of such a step lately, but nothing definite has developed. Some of the members of the Senate think that such a committee would have equal rights at the peace table with the Presidential appointees, while others hold that the committee would have no standing. The general idea appeared to be that the President should be left to handle the treaty and the Senate to pass upon it.

Some of the opinions of Senators upon the matter were as follows:

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, Democrat, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee—Some step will be necessary. It is possible the President may provide some means of communication with the Senate. If this is not done, the Senate may take some step itself. The matter has been discussed, but nothing has been done yet.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota, Republican, member of the Foreign Relations Committee:

"The committee would have just as much right at the conference as the Presidential Commissioners. But the Senate would not appoint the committee. The Senate would remain in this country and act in the Capitol and not in a foreign country. While the Senate would have a right to send such a committee, I think the proper thing to do in the matter of a treaty is to allow the President to handle it, and then have the Senate pass upon it. He should advise with the Senate. The usual method has been to let the President handle the matter. Heretofore Presidents have always consulted the Foreign Relations Committee, and I think it very proper that the President should advise the committee before he presents any treaty."

Senator Reed of Missouri, Democrat: "I have not heard the suggestion of a committee being appointed. I have not considered the right of a Senate Committee to sit at the conference. I would rather not discuss the subject just now."

Senator Harding of Ohio, Republican: "No, I have heard no idea of a committee being appointed by the Senate. It would be almost an insurrection, nowadays. I do think the Senate should be represented; I think it would be a very great shame if it were not. It is a well established right of the President to choose his own commission. But he will make a great mistake, for himself and for the country, if he does not choose a big representative commission that will make the treaty instead of merely obeying the mandates of the President."

Senator Ashurst of Arizona, Democrat: "There has been some talk of such a committee, but it has been rather nebulous. It would not be admitted to the conference, anyway. It would be treated with politeness, and would be welcomed abroad, but it would not be allowed to sit at the conference. The President, through his Ambassadors, Secretaries or delegates formulates the treaty. The Senate under the Constitution has nothing to do with the treaty until the President sends it in. The President can withdraw a treaty at any time. I have been studying the question very closely for three or four days. It is also true, by the way, that a treaty is superior to every other law, even though it is passed upon by only one house of Congress."

If the President is aware of the feeling that has been aroused in Congressional circles over his decision to go abroad at this time when problems of reconstruction, readjustment and demobilization are to the fore, he has given no sign of it.

Adverse expressions are not confined to Republican Senators and Representatives. Some Democrats are just as emphatic in declaring that the President ought to stay at home. It is asserted by Democratic Senators that in the Senate nobody has been found who believes the President should attend the peace conference.

The feeling has grown to such an extent that things are being said that are strikingly different from opinions of the President's judgment that were heard up to a short time ago. Some profess to see in the sentiment aroused against the President's intention to go abroad the possibility of a schism in his own party.

Without doubt there is resentment in Democratic Senatorial circles over the President's failure to recognize the Senate in the appointment of members of the Peace Delegation and this resentment is made stronger because of the feeling that it is unwise for the President to leave the country.

The situation is more intense than appears on the surface. It has had the effect of reviving prior criticism that the President does not consult members of the legislative branch of the Government on important matters upon which the Senate or the House or both will ultimately be obliged to pass. There can be little doubt that the President will be severely criticised for leaving the Government in the hands of Cabinet officers.

DISCUSSING EXTENSION OF ALSACE-LORRAINE

French Suggest That a Return to Boundaries of 1815 Be Insisted Upon.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Just what is Alsace-Lorraine geographically? This is a lively topic of speculation in the Paris press. The question many people are asking is whether the provinces restored to France will be the same as those stolen in 1870, or if they should include the larger boundaries involved in old treaties extending back two centuries and a half?

Concerning reparations, M. Painlevé said to me today, "why Alsace-Lorraine should not be established as it was when it gave itself freely to France the last time the population expressed its wishes. In 1815 the northern frontier of the province was cut into as an act of violence after Waterloo with the intention of weakening our border. That part, therefore, the taking of which impaired the frontier of defense, should be restored, as well as the Alsace-Lorraine of 1870."

Concerning reparations, M. Painleve said:

"Germany must repair all, or nearly all, that she has destroyed. Unfortunately, the men who have been killed, especially the specialists who will be most missed from the economic point of view, cannot be replaced. Germany's labor forces should be made to work for a definite period to compensate us while we take time to instal new machinery. Besides labor she must give us money and some kinds of raw material. The way in which America can best help us is by immediately sending models of machinery, which will be of inestimable value in the reconstruction of the devastated territory—machinery and explosives for tearing up roots of dead trees, agricultural motors, and chemicals for the fertilization of soil, material for both private and industrial buildings, lathes, and all forms of machinery necessary in engineering and textile workshops. It is a question whether Germany in her present state of chaos will be able to help as much as she should, but she must be kept at the job, however long it may take until reparation is complete."

PHELAN PLEADS IRISH CAUSE.

Backed by Catholic Clergy, Senator Will Memorialize Wilson.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—Catholic organizations were notified today by United States Senator James D. Phelan that he would present a petition of the Catholic clergy of California to President Wilson, asking that Ireland's political freedoms be espoused by the United States at the peace conference. The petition was signed by Archbishop Edward J. Hanna of the Archdiocese of San Francisco and the Right Rev. John J. Cantwell and Thomas Grace, bishops of Los Angeles and Sacramento dioceses, and 800 clergymen in the State.

Similar petitions from all parts of the United States were being signed today for presentation to the President, it was announced. None but clergymen who are American citizens are permitted to sign the petitions.

'REVELRY BY NIGHT' IN OLD BRUSSELS

By PHILIP GIBBS.

and now they were caught up this city of frolic, and their songs rang out—songs they had sung before the old battles; and the old cry, "Are we downhearted?" was answered by a tremendous "No!"

Scots in kilts were the favorites. These "Ladies from Hell," as the Germans called them, had aroused the wildest cheers when they passed in the procession, so that the music of their pipes had been drowned by the clamor about them; and now in the evening each one of them was taken prisoner in friendship by scores of men and women, who took turns in holding his arms and dancing around him, while Jock grinned and said, "It's a braw nicht the nicht," and hid a certain embarrassment at all this worship. One Scottish officer was followed about by a crowd of 600 people, and in his shyness pretended to be unaware of them and made remarks to an English friend about Belgian architecture and reconstruction after the war, until suddenly he was seized and overwhelmed.

A Wooden-Legged Hero.

One hero of the night was a Frenchman with whom I had gone traveling down many long roads of the war, when the Germans held their lines. On those journeys he used to recite poems of Ronsard, putting steam up in the chauffeur in front by the passion of his voice; and at the journey's end in the trenches, looking into the German lines, he used to make sketches for future paintings, having been an artist before he was a soldier of France and before he lost his leg and strapped a wooden peg on in its place. In the Brussels "Kermesse" he became a boy again and laughed out of the heart of his boyhood and sang little old songs of France in restaurants, where the crowds sang with him and cheered him and kissed him, and there was never a dance he would not join with his wooden leg.

In these great restaurants of Brussels, where food was scarce and dear beyond one's wildest imaginings, but where laughter and gayety could be had for nothing, British officers found their national shyness put to the rack. The people rose as they entered, and shouted, "Vive l'Angleterre!" or in good English, "England forever!" Some edged out again, blushing like schoolboys, and had hardly the readiness of mind to answer back, "Vive la Belgique!"

But it was good to be an Englishman in Brussels, and for miles on the way there all along the road from Ghent through Alost, the khaki tunic was a sign for cheers from men and women trudging many miles to get to the capital in time to see the King. Scores of thousands of them waved flags and handkerchiefs and muffs and cried out the word "England!" and there was such brightness of welcome in their eyes that it melted one and made one glad.

On the Historic Soil of Waterloo.

In every village on the way to Brussels there was a little drama belonging to history, and mingling curiously in one's mind with old memories of another chapter of history, when, one hundred years ago, British soldiers marched down these roads and through these villages on the way to Waterloo.

I came into the town of Hal just as the British troops entered it, and when the corps commander was receiving an address of welcome in the Town Hall. A vast crowd surged in the market place through which the General and his staff made their way slowly, followed by tall banners richly embroidered, carried by the city standard bearers, while the bells clashed out and the bands played the anthems of the three nations, and hundreds of boys and girls flung streamers at us. That was on the way to Waterloo, across which British cavalry was crossing for the first time since that June day in 1815 when Picton's Horse and the Household Cavalry under Lord Edward Somerset rode out toward Hougomont and La Haye Sainte.

I met some Scots on the way to Waterloo beyond the village of Hal, and I wondered if these Jocks were thrilled as I was by the thought of crossing those fields haunted forever by the ghosts of Wellington's army, that little army of 24,000 men who decided the fate of Europe for a time, as now again the map has been redrawn by the blood of their successors. Through the haze of the morning one's imagination saw the figure of Wellington on his white horse, that hard, hook-nosed face of his, staring over those fields; and further on the voices of French soldiers in the long, tangled traffic of transport and guns brought back the memory of their great-grandfathers who, a hundred years ago, shouted "Vive l'Empereur! Vive l'Empereur!" as the stout little man with the sallow face passed in his coach before watching the ruin of all his dreams and the downfall of his star.

The men I passed on the road, those poilus in blue, had fought through many battles more bloody than that of Waterloo—on the British side it was an affair of two modern divisions—and through all of them they had shown the spirit of Napoleon's Old Guard and of the army of liberty which marched through Europe with the song of the "Marseillaise." Now British soldiers and French soldiers were marching side by side, saluting one another with friendly greetings as veterans in the war which had made them comrades forever—unless there is great forgetfulness.

Cheering Heard From a Sick Bed.

I did not get quite as far as the field of Waterloo, and I saw nothing of the King's entry into Brussels, for I was put out of action for a time by a motor smash; and in the capital, while the royal procession passed, I lay in a small room, very sorry for myself that the drama of the greatest day in Belgian history since the beginning of the war came to me only in sound.

Up from the streets through my window came gusts of cheers, rising into storms of cheers, a joyous clamor of vast multitudes; and lying there I said to myself: "That is the King passing down the Rue Royale." And presently, when the wild hurricane of cheers beat against the walls of my bedroom: "That is for the Scottish troops going by, I guess."

It was as though the city of Brussels had one voice, speaking with passion and joy, laughing for sheer gladness, silent now and then as though holding its breath at some dramatic moment, and then shouting again with delirious enthusiasm. It was a queer thing to lie there listening to it all.

In the afternoon the King went to the Hotel de Ville to receive the address from the Burgomaster, and the crowds massed densely in the Grande Place walled round by beautiful old guild houses with high gables and gilded columns. It was dusk, and the faces of all these people were white in the light of the electric standards.

In the balcony of the Maison du Roi, one of those old sixteenth century houses oposite the Hotel de Ville, there were trumpeters, and they played a thrilling fanfare very sweet in its ancient melody. I am told that as the King passed with the little Prince and Princess the Council Chamber of the Hotel de Ville was hung with banners as I saw it the next day, and with tapestries of mediaeval guildsmen on the paneled walls, so that it was full of rich color. Not many people were present in the room, but among them were some of the great figures of this four years' history in Belgium—Burgomaster Max himself, with a tawny beard like the Belgian lion, and Cardinal Mercier, whose courage would never yield the faith of his people to German tyranny, and Brand Whitlock, the American Minister, who did his utmost to save the life of Edith Cavell, and the King himself, who stayed with his soldiers when they were in the mud of the Yser. A Papal Nuncio was there in a scarlet skullcap below his broad-brimmed hat, and afterward he went out on to the balcony and spoke to the crowd and gave them his blessing.

It was the crowning day in the liberation of Belgium, and in the night of frolic that followed it the joy of a people freed from the nightmare of hostile rule was refreshed by dancing and singing and by very true and simple gratitude to any soldier who had fought for freedom. For a little while the black things which lurk in the heart of a great city were washed out by this spirit of divine comradeship in the family of life, and it was the goodness in human nature which exalted the divine folly of this Brussels night.

Worked for Peace Always, Dethroned Emperor Says—Fears Bolshevist Wave.

ASKS AFTER THE PRESIDENT

Empress Shows Her Children and Complains of Difficulty in Obtaining Milk for Them.

VIENNA, Nov. 24, (Associated Press.)—Declaring that there was pressing need in Austria for assistance from America and the Allies, former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary insisted today that the danger of Bolshevism was very great in his country. It was in conversation with a correspondent of The Associated Press that the former sovereign told of the peril which he said was impending.

The former Emperor, his wife and five children, Otto, Robert, Felix, Carl, and Adelheid, are at Eckertsau Castle. With them are a few faithful men and women, including Count Alexander Esterhazy, former Chief of Court to the Emperor, and Naval Captain Seedank. An interview with the former Emperor was granted after the request had been transmitted through the President of the Council of the German-Austrian Republic.

The correspondent was then permitted to motor some twenty-five miles to the castle, which is situated in the centre of a vast plain devoted to farming and dotted here and there with clusters of villages. Eckertsau Castle is constructed of stone and is surrounded by trees. It is guarded by a few soldiers, although there are scarcely any callers. The building dates from the twelfth century, but its large rooms were remodeled a century ago and later handsomely furnished, so that the castle now appears to be merely a luxurious countryplace.

Ex-Emperor Shows Traces of Strain.

As the correspondent entered the gates he was met by Captain Seedank and conducted through a lofty hall to the second story of the castle, where he was received by the former Emperor. Charles wore a General's uniform and was apparently vigorous, but lines about his blue eyes gave hints of the stress of recent days. He appeared to feel keenly the great tragedy that had come through the collapse of his Empire, but he cordially greeted the correspondent, shaking hands with a strong, friendly grip.

Motioning the correspondent to a chair by a centre table and taking another himself, the former Emperor spoke first in English and then lapsed into French.

"I authorize the Associated Press to say that not a single day should be lost by America and the Allies in helping the people here, so grave is the situation," he said. "During the war one of my preoccupations was the task of obtaining food for the soldiers and people, but now, notwithstanding all my efforts, it is most distressing to find there is none left for them. If America and the Allies do not recognize this fact, suffering here will be very great within a few weeks. Indeed, it is already so, and every day we do not use in the endeavor to get food is a day lost.

"We have done our best, and more cannot be done. If food and coal are not brought, we shall have disorder in Vienna. Possibly that disorder from Russia which we call Bolshevism will come. The people here are fine, kind and patient, but when any one is without food he is apt to do many unusual and violent things. Looking back, we may recall that Bolshevism started in Russia because of the lack of food. I think it in the interest of the Allies to aid us, as Bolshevism when started may spread and become a danger to the Allies too.

"Our coal and food situation is worse because of transportation conditions. The railroads became badly disorganized lately. I am very glad to see an American who represents a country which is working for peace. I have worked for peace always.

"Regarding the future—I cannot speak of the past—I can only repeat that I feel I did my duty. However, I do hope that peace will bring good fortune, happier days and a better understanding among all peoples."

The former monarch feels that the breaking up of the empire into small groups of nations is bound to bring economic and political disaster to all, and that some sort of a central government is necessary for their common interests.

It was insisted to the correspondent by officers at the castle that the former Emperor's whole heart and mind had been centered on the work of securing the welfare of the people. The only pleasure he had taken during the war, they said, had been to hunt for a few hours each week. He worked eighteen hours a day for long periods. He was said to be much hurt by stories which were circulated in allied countries about his private life, especially drunkeness. As a matter of fact, the officers added, he drank but one glass of wine or beer at lunch and never partook of liquors at dinner.

Before the correspondent left, after half an hour's conversation, Charles inquired if President Wilson was well. He expressed no surprise when told that the President's hair had grown whiter since the United States entered the war, seeming, himself, to feel the undermining strain of the great conflict.

A Chat with Ex-Empress Zita.

Former Empress Zita also received the correspondent. The children especially Otto, the eldest, who passed his sixth birthday only last week, were shown to him and he obtained an intimate view of the life of the former imperial family in greatly changed circumstances.

In view of the food conditions which apply everywhere, the correspondent had permission to present the children with a two-pound box of American chocolates. Speaking in English, the former Empress thanked him effusively for it, saying:

"For two years we have not had real chocolate. It is also most difficult to obtain milk for the children without which, not only mine, but all children, will be stunted in growth and perhaps may fall ill."

Otto, a golden-haired, blue-eyed, grave-mannered boy, shook hands with the correspondent, saying in English:

"How do you do? Thank you."

The former Empress said that Otto had just learned the English words, adding:

"He speaks only German and Hungarian, but he is intensely interested to know all about America, where it is, and what kind of people live there. He also is anxious to talk to you, as we see so few new faces."

The former Empress seemed to take pleasure in talking of her children and gave the impression of being wrapped up in their welfare. She personally cared for them all during the war.

During the time that the former Emperor was a plain Lieutenant and seriously following the army as a career, the former Empress went with her husband to his various posts. Since the war they have spent the Winters at Luxemburg and the Summers at Sievering so as to be close to army headquarters at Reichenau, where the former Emperor went daily. Infrequently they lived in Budapest or at other castles in Hungary. The Empress was not able to accompany her husband on his frequent trips to the Russian or Italian fronts.

During their short stay on the imperial throne they did not reside any great length of time at Schönbrunn, the old Summer palace on the outskirts of Vienna, as there were no living apartments or other conveniences there.

What will become of the former imperial family is a matter of conjecture. There are rumors, however, of their going traveling when the railways are in a better condition.

GERMAN SHIPS DIRTY IN SURRENDER PARADE

Sailors Were Shabby and Regardless of Discipline—British Officers Coldly Courteous.

LONDON, Nov. 25, (British Wireless Service.)—Describing the German warships which surrendered to the British and are now interned in Scapa Flow, the correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says:

"The German Admiral's flag—white with a thin black cross and two black balls—indicative of his rank, still flew at the main topgallant of the Friedrich der Grosse as the German squadron moved between the British lines. It hung limp and dirty—typical in this state of all the German ships and their crews. The ships were in such condition that they looked like vessels laid by for breaking-up purposes. They could not have been painted for two years. Their sides, funnels, and bridges were covered with red rust, and the masts were black with soot. The guns even had not been painted for months.

"The Derfflinger was in better condition than any of the others, and there was an appearance on board that discipline was still in vogue. On all the other ships the crews were lounging about, many on the quarterdecks, not recognizing their officers. On the Derfflinger the officers were parading smartly about on their own quarter, and the men were quiet and orderly. As we passed close to each ship the men crowded the rail. They looked miserable and drenched and cold. Their clothing was nondescript. There was an air of melancholy and oppression everywhere.

"It was a pleasure to come from them alongside our own great ships, where everything was clean and spick. Hearty sailormen, with cheery faces, were at every porthole, and the quarter decks were occupied only by officers, the commander walking briskly along in the traditional way, telescope under his arm.

"The German officers have been very polite, and no trouble whatever has been experienced with them. The British officers have rejected all advances at friendliness and have extended only the necessary courtesy."

FIRTH OF FORTH, Scotland, Nov. 25.—The first division of German battleships and four battlecruisers and destroyers left for Scapa Flow today, and by evening the Firth will be cleared of them.

The ships are in a deplorable state through general neglect. The internal state of the battleships is on a par with their external appearance. They smell mouldy, owing to the electric ventilation system on them having been stopped.

ROYALISTS ACTIVE IN AUSTRIA AGAIN

National Council Posts Placards Warning the People Against Counter-Revolution.

VAST ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED

Cold and Snow Add to Misery of Vienna's Population—People's Hope in Wilson.

ZURICH, Nov. 25.—The counter-revolutionary movement in Austria is progressing to such an extent that the National Council has placarded the streets warning the public against it. It is said that the Monarchists are resorting to all kinds of methods to excite distrust of the council and trying to frighten the people by the prospect of allied occupation, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Frankfort Gazette.

VIENNA, Nov. 20, (Associated Press.)—Difficulties attending the process of returning to a peace footing after a great war are illustrated here. Munition factories have been shut down, throwing out of work hundreds of thousands of men and women, who have little prospect of obtaining employment because of the lack of coal. Cold weather has already begun and snow has fallen in Vienna.

While the streets of the city are bright and the theatres and opera are open, well-dressed people are walking or using street cars, as cabmen demand from $2 to $3 a ride. This is all on the surface. There is untold misery in the poorer quarters, with a constant cry for bread, of which there is provided half a loaf a week for each person. Prices here are probably the highest to be found in Europe and seem fantastic. The price of a shirtwaist is $100, stockings cost $5, and a suit of clothes $150.

The profiteers are also hit, the industry of weaving paper into material for the manufacture of men's and women's clothing having virtually collapsed. This material, which once sold for $6 a yard, is now being dumped on the market at any price.

Vienna is making desperate efforts to get food and coal, which the Czechoslovaks are said to have offered, provided the western strip of old Bohemia adjoining old Bavaria is given to them. It is also stated that propositions have been made by American packing companies, but cable communication is very slow and uncertain. There is need for the business people here to open up their former vocations, but this at present is impossible.

It is proposed to ask President Wilson for help in carrying out the work of adjusting the country to its new life. The correspondent overheard a dispute between an Austrian railroad conductor and some fellow-line. The latter asked:

"Who was it who licked Austria?"

The conductor replied:

"Wilson did it and he will now help us."

The biggest fact apparent in Austria's breaking up of housekeeping is that there is no poignant regret among the common people. The sentiment generally found was expressed by a soldier the correspondent met among the rivers of men retreating from the Italian front. He said:

"Now the war is over and we are all brothers, whether French, British, or Americans. Any kind of a brother is a good one."

Along the line coming up from Trieste to Vienna the correspondent talked with dozens of officers, who were disappointed merely because their defeat had been at the hands of the Italians, whose military qualities they always scorned.

"If anybody else had done it we would not mind," said one General, who said the defeat might be attributed to three reasons: Hungary's withdrawal of support and troops, the war tiredness of the Austrians, and President Wilson's notes, culminating in his refusal to treat with Emperor Charles. These reasons, he said, brought about the final smash, with the soldiers refusing to fight when attacked by the Italians.

In the retreat millions of dollars' worth of war materials that might have been saved were left behind, as were foodstuffs sorely needed at home.

In Vienna it is believed there are nearly a million Austro-Hungarian soldiers in Italy, and the absence of so many men is felt by their families.

WANTS TERMS AT ONCE.

Hungary Requests Allies to Hold Immediate Peace Discussion.

BASLE, Nov. 25.—The Hungarian Government has requested the Allies to hold an immediate discussion of peace terms, according to reports reaching Swiss newspapers.

ROME, Nov. 25.—An Interallied Naval Committee may meet soon in Rome to discuss the naval conditions of the armistice with Austria, according to a dispatch from Corfu to the Corriere d'Italia. The message, which states that the information is from reliable sources, says the discussion will not be with a view to changing the conditions, but to decide upon the best way to carry them out.

CZECHS TO STAY IN RUSSIA.

Stefanik, Their War Minister, Pays High Tribute to America.

HARBIN, Nov. 23, (Associated Press).—The Czechoslovak forces in Russia are not interested in the internal affairs in Russia, and they desire to return to their homeland, but will remain in Russia because the allied Governments have requested them to do so, declares General Stefanik, Minister of War in the Czechoslovak Government. The General was in Harbin today on his way to the Volga front and paid the following tribute to American participation in the war:

"America by this war has not gained provinces nor indemnities, but has gained the love of the free peoples of the world. President Wilson's pronouncement gave the first practical solution to the problems of our oppressed people."

General Stefanik believes that if force is used to break up opposition, the Bolshevist question can be decided in weeks rather than in months.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Secretary Baker explained, in response to inquiries today, that the American forces in Russia have been following President Wilson's instructions to the letter.

"Our forces in Russia," said Mr. Baker, "are doing exactly what the President directed them to do, that is, rendering assistance to the Czechoslovaks in Siberia and preventing the accumulation of military stores and supplies at Murmansk from falling into the hands of the Germans."

ITALY'S LOSSES 2,000,000.

Of These 500,000 Died and 500,000 Were Permanently Disabled.

The total casualties of the Italian armies in the European war were about 2,000,000 men, of whom 400,000 were killed or died of wounds, and 100,000 died from disease and other causes. These figures were given out yesterday by the Italian Bureau of Public Information, 501 Fifth Avenue. Five hundred thousand others are listed as permanently disabled, leaving 1,000,000 who were wounded but not permanently disabled, missing, or prisoners.

In THE TIMES of Sunday in a reference to the casualties on the Union side during the civil war, it was stated that 110,000 soldiers were killed in battle and wounded. This should have read "killed or died of wounds."

BOOM GEN. PERSHING FOR PRESIDENT IN 1920

Ohio Republicans Plan to Incorporate—Do Not Know Whether the General Would Run.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 25.—A campaign for the election of General John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, to the Presidency in 1920 was formally launched in Ohio today, by an application to the Secretary of State for the incorporation of "The Pershing Republican League."

Charles Dick of Akron, former United States Senator, and fourteen other prominent Republicans of Akron and Summit County are sponsors for the movement. Mr. Dick's name heads the list of the fifteen men who signed the articles of incorporation which were presented to the Secretary of State.

It is said that Mr. Dick probably will be made President of the league. As set forth in the articles of incorporation, the purpose of the league is to "crystallize the already existing sentiment for General John J. Pershing as President of the United States in 1920, and to work for his nomination and election." With the organization of the parent league, it is planned to form other leagues in every State.

The Ohio laws forbid the use of money by a corporation in behalf of any candidate or party. The Secretary of State has not granted the incorporation papers and will not do so until he has been advised by the Attorney General.

Besides Mr. Dick the following citizens are named in the papers as incorporators: C. L. Knight, owner of The Akron Beacon Journal; Hugh Allen, managing editor of that paper; former Judge W. B. Pardee, W. J. Laub, Major E. F. Taggart, Frank G. Carnahan, C. F. Berry, A. N. Waite, V. C. Walker, William H. Taylor, W. W. McIntosh, John W. McCoy, H. K. Butler, and Thomas B. Greene, Jr.

"We expect to have the entire nation organized long before the first primary election is held in any State for the selection of delegates to the Republican National Convention," said Mr. Dick.

"We do not know whether General Pershing wants to be President, but we do know there is a great sentiment throughout the nation for him to become President, and the organization of the league is to crystallize that sentiment. If it is sufficient to nominate him, I am certain that he will consider it, like Judge Hughes, his duty to accept the nomination."

VOIDING CONTRACTS ABROAD.

Pershing's Staff Busy Reversing Great Military Machine.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—General Pershing issued orders following the signing of the armistice with Germany for the prompt reduction of the extensive system for purchasing supplies for the United States Army in Europe and for the speedy transition to a peace basis. Acting on this order, military authorities have given notice of cancellation of contracts, so far as possible, with a view to rapid diminishing of the inflowing stock of supplies required for an army of 2,000,000 men. An officer who has had much to do with this branch of the service sums up the situation as follows:

"The American Expeditionary Forces on Nov. 11, the day the armistice was declared, was traveling at full speed ahead and was at the height of its supply activity. To reverse this tremendous business machine is the task upon which it is now engaged, and the efficiency of its business organization is now being manifested in its quick accommodation to entirely changed circumstances.

"When the American forces first began coming to France there was a great scarcity of ocean tonnage. It was impossible for many months to ship more than 300,000 or 400,000 tons of supplies to the forces, notwithstanding the great necessity for ammunition material, engines and general construction equipment. Search for material in Europe, therefore, had to be conducted with the greatest possible energy over a wide field. The American Army established agencies in all allied and neutral countries under general orders to buy on final smash, with the soldiers refusing to fight when attacked by the Italians.

In the retreat millions of dollars' worth of war materials that might have been saved were left behind, as were foodstuffs sorely needed at home.

In Vienna it is believed there are nearly a million Austro-Hungarian soldiers in Italy, and the absence of so many men is felt by their families.

BURLESON NAMES VAIL WIRE ADVISER

Telephone Chief Will Help Coordinate Systems, Postmaster General Announces.

OFFICIALS ANSWER MACKAY

Marconi Company Opposes Seizure Monopoly—Statement Condemning Control of Cables.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, has agreed to become the "personal adviser" of Postmaster General Burleson in the consolidation of the telegraph and cable systems. A statement issued at the Post Office Department today said:

"Mr. Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, has consented to give Postmaster General Burleson the benefit of his wide experience in the organization of the wire system under Government control. Mr. Vail will be consulted by the Postmaster General as his personal adviser, and will prepare for the Postmaster General, for his assistance in directing the wire control, a comprehensive report on the wire service, with a view to the more extended use of the telephone, telegraph, and cable during Government control.

"The very long study which Mr. Vail has given to the problem of universal wire service and the unified and extended cable systems and his pre-eminence as an authority on the organization of electrical communication will render his service and assistance of great value to the Postmaster General."

It was stated at the department that it was a mistaken assumption that Mr. Vail would help in determining the compensations. This work would continue to be handled by the Government, it was said. Mr. Vail would devote to the problems of operation his time and talents, for which officials have great admiration in that particular regard.

The point of view of the Post Office Department by which it considers "absurd" the argument of Clarence H. Mackay that consolidation of the Postal and Western Union Telegraph lines would violate the Sherman Anti-Trust act was learned today by THE NEW YORK TIMES. Summarized, the contentions of the Post Office Department are:

First—The Government is dealing only with the physical properties in the present situation. It holds that it does not control the companies except in the matter of control of the wires themselves. The companies are perfectly free to sell the properties to other companies. If the Government decides to tie the two systems together, it is a consolidation only of the physical properties, and not of the titles.

Second—Assuming that, being empowered by Congress to purchase the two systems, the Government did so, although it said nothing about consolidation, the Sherman law would not be applicable against the Government, because it applies only to private ownership.

The statement was made today that before compensation was awarded, the Postal Company was asked to participate in a friendly suit, so that the questions in dispute might be dealt with. It was said that the company was informed that it had not presented enough evidence upon which to base an agreement, whereas the Western Union had submitted a proposal, which had been accepted.

The committee which considers standardization of rates was at work today. One of the changes it contemplates is a modification of the extra rate charged during the war for installation of telephones. The committee believes that with the lessening of pressure on labor and materials the charge may be reduced, and probably eventually eliminated.

MARCONI COMPANY OPPOSES CONTROL

No Reason for Government Wireless Monopoly, Says Nally—Ward Against Cable Control.

That the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America is unalterably opposed to Government ownership and operation of the radio stations in the United States which it owns, and which have been under Government control and operation since before this country entered the war, was indicated by a statement issued yesterday by Edward J. Nally, Vice President and General Manager of the company. As soon as he had given out the statement Mr. Nally took a train for Washington. He said he would have more to say, probably, when he returned. The statement follows:

"Mr. Nally wished to particularly point out that the situation with respect to wireless was in no way different from that of communication by telegraph, telephone, and submarine cables. In other words, there is no special reason for Government ownership and operation of radio communication that does not equally apply to other means of communication.

"The fact that the statement prepared by the Navy Department and given out by Judge [Representative] Alexander states that transoceanic radio telegraphy is not a serious competitor of the cables, and that high-power stations are not yet able to receive from one another all day and in all seasons, proves that the Government is not able to make the most of its opportunities and get the best results from transoceanic wireless operation. This statement is a weak attempt to minimize, in the eyes of the public, the importance of wireless competition with the cables.

"As a matter of fact, before the war, the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company had inaugurated its transpacific service with Japan and was building up a very successful commercial business with the Orient. The cable companies recognized that there was a competitor in the field, because they were forced to reduce their rates and to add new classes of service, which, during all the years they monopolized transpacific communication, they had refused to do.

"The Marconi Company, by reason of its organization and its improved apparatus, particularly with the aid of the Weagant invention, of which wide announcement was recently made, is in position to guarantee to the business public accurate and reliable service at all times and at rates lower than those charged by the cables. Already it is being petitioned by business firms on the Pacific Coast and in New York to resume its service, owing to the congested condition of the cables and the poor service which they are giving.

"It seems a pity, at this time, when transoceanic communication is so important, that commercial wireless companies should not be given the fullest opportunity to meet the public demands."

Marconi Financial Showing.

By way of answer to that part of the statement made public by Representative Alexander as Chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, that, except in very special circumstances, wireless telegraph companies have never made any profit, except by the sale of stock, the Marconi company pointed to the financial showing it made for the years 1914 to 1917, inclusive. The figures, taken from the annual report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1917, show:

Net income for year 1914, after charging reserves, carried to balance sheet, $149,877.47; for 1915, $417,318.51; for 1916, $259,888.80, and for 1917, $817,772.69.

The company has issued and outstanding $10,000,000 of common stock. Since its organization, in 1899, it has paid two dividends, one of 2 per cent. in 1914, and one of 6 per cent. in 1917.

A statement opposing Government ownership of cable systems was issued by George G. Ward, for thirty-four years Vice President of the Commercial Cables Company as follows:

"If the cables were all taken over by Governments, Great Britain would have a decided advantage over the United States. That country would be entirely independent of the United States for transoceanic communication, because both ends of the main Atlantic cable sections land on British territory.

"The United States would be in no such position. There is only one cable running direct from the United States to Europe, and for economic reasons, efficiency, and maintenance, it is not very likely there will be another. The distance is too great and such a lengthy cable is of very much less practical value than cables of shorter lengths.

"All the other cables from the United States form only parts of the transatlantic system. They run from points in the United States to points in Nova Scotia or Newfoundland or the French Island of St. Pierre and thence traverse the Atlantic to Great Britain or France. Consequently, the vital sections of the cables, namely, the main Atlantic Ocean portions, are completely under the jurisdiction of the British or French Governments.

"I can hardly conceive that, even in the event of dual Government ownership of the cables, the British and Canadian Governments would consider any other Government but their own having control over the operations of the cables between Canada and Great Britain. Under these circumstances, the United States would be left merely with a control over the American ends of the cables between American territory and Canada or Newfoundland.

Potential Complications.

"It is true that certain short Channel cables connecting Great Britain with Continental Europe are owned jointly by the British and Continental countries where they land, but in such cases each Government controls one end of the cable, and either Government can suspend the operation at will. As stated above, however, the United States Government could acquire only one end of the cable line from the United States to Canada or Newfoundland, and therefore the most essential part of the control, namely, the main Atlantic section, would remain in foreign hands, and communication with North America maintained independent of the United States Government. This might affect American business interests and be a source of international complications, and I do not think that the American Government should or that the American public would care to embark on any such project.

"All Governments allow a foreign corporation to make landings on their shores, because foreign corporations may be controlled by the Governments without disturbing the relations between Governments, but if the cables were owned by the Government, differences and disputes might arise from time to time and cause diplomatic embarrassment. The European Governments have fostered the development of private cable enterprises where the cables land on foreign territory, because they have recognized the impracticability of such cables being owned by the Governments.

"I do not see on what ground the Postmaster General can feel that, unless he takes over the control of the cables, some difficulty may arise to interrupt continuous communication within the next few months. For over four years of the war our cables have been operated to their utmost capacity. Notwithstanding the constant menace by enemy submarines, our repair ship has been engaged for months at a time in the middle of the Atlantic repairing cable communication. The British Government has expressed high appreciation of the work that has been done in this respect. We have managed to keep our cables intact, in spite of all of the difficulties and dangers incident to the war. Nothing has been left undone to provide a continuous service to meet the exceptional demands of the war emergency.

War Service by Cables.

"The United States Government has had a special representative, in addition to the censorship staff, (and censorship in Europe,) to watch the operations of the cables, and I feel sure he will certify that the companies have bent every effort to meet the Government and public needs. What we have been unable to do the Government could not have done. With all due respect to the Postmaster General it is unfair to use the recent temporary conditions as an argument for Government possession. Both the Western Union and ourselves suffered severe staff shortage owing to the influenza epidemic. Our cable system was intact, theirs was partially interrupted.

"In Great Britain our concessions give the Government the right to take over the control of our cables during war if they see fit, but that Government has made no attempt whatever to use this power, because they have undoubtedly realized that the companies were doing everything that it was possible to do to render the best possible service. Furthermore, even if the British Government should at any time exercise that right, it is very properly provided in the concessions that such right shall only apply to that portion of the company's property within British territory.

"I am unable to understand the reasons given by the Postmaster General for taking over the cables. Just what he means by his statement concerning continuous transmission being bounded neither by continents nor oceans, etc., is difficult to comprehend. There is absolutely no restriction or limitation of continuous transmission under present conditions.

"The present situation with regard to the relations between land line and cable companies is very clear and practical, and I am sure is the most desirable to the users of cables. It provides a choice of cable routes, which many users of the cables both here and in Europe consider important.

Difficulties Abroad.

Just how the American Postmaster General's control will be applied to the cables in foreign countries I cannot see. Foreign governments have always been jealous of their right to maintain jurisdiction over the operation of cables in their own countries, and stipulations to that effect are contained in the concessions granted by foreign governments to private companies. The British, French and Portuguese concessions, under which this company's cables are landed in Europe, forbid the transfer of any of the rights or powers conferred upon the company by such concessions.

"As stated above, in all of the cable systems crossing the Atlantic, excepting the French company's, the main sections begin and terminate on British territory. A very large number of messages are exchanged between Canada and Great Britain, without ever touching the United States. It is difficult to imagine that the British or Canadian authorities would yield the right to the United States Postmaster General to control the business between Great Britain and Canada. I foresee the possibility of international difficulties in the proposal, which are likely to terminate to the disadvantage of American interests.

"American enterprise controls and operates [illegible] satisfactorily cables. In addition, a French company owns two. Under the principle of reciprocity American cable companies have secured concessions in foreign countries to land and operate their cables. The United States has allowed British and French companies to land cables in the United States, in return for which Great Britain and France have allowed American companies to land cables in those countries."

A resolution adopted recently by the National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissioners, urging the return of the telegraph and telephone properties of the country to their private owners as soon as the military situation permitted was forwarded to Postmaster General Burleson yesterday by James Blaine Walker, Secretary of the association.

It is asserted in the preamble that the ends sought to be attained by Federal control as a war measure have already been satisfied, that during Federal control and operation of the properties [illegible] no change in the corporate management of the companies, and that "pending the natural termination of such Federal control the State Commissions are embarrassed by the assumption by the Postmaster General of exclusive control over rates."

The resolution was introduced by Charles B. Hill, Chairman of the Public Service Commission of the Second District of this State at the recent convention of the association. Mr. Hill said that there was great dissatisfaction over certain increased rates which had been [illegible] upon users of telegraph and telephone services passed into Government control, and that complaints filed with the State Commissions concerning the matter could not be reviewed because of the situation created by the Government.

FORD'S PAPER OUT JAN. 2.

Manufacturer Will Discuss World Problems in Every Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Nov. 25.—The first issue of The Dearborn Independent as a national weekly, under the editorship of E. G. Pipp, will appear Jan. 2. It will probably consist of sixteen pages, 11 inches by 16. One page in each issue will be reserved for the discussion by Mr. Ford of world and national problems. This is expected to be the principal page of the paper and the one which will attract the most attention.

Temporarily, space has been taken in the factory plant in Dearborn for the newspaper. The staff will work there and the first issue will be printed there. Later, it is to be expected, a building will be erected especially for the newspaper.

Mr. Pipp has engaged a staff composed of men selected from Detroit newspapers.

HARCOURT NIPPED A REVOLT

Tells How He Rushed Arms to South Africa in 1914.

LONDON, Nov. 23, (via Montreal).—At a meeting of the Empire Parliamentary Association at the House of Parliament tonight, Viscount Lewis Harcourt, First Commissioner of Works, told an interesting story of the methods used in combating the threatened revolt in South Africa in 1914.

The danger which threatened South Africa at that time, he said, was not fully realized by the country in general. Rebel forces had captured the arms and ammunition belonging to the forces of the Union of South Africa and General Botha cabled for their replacement without delay. An appeal was made to Lord Kitchener, who refused to send one rifle or one cartridge from the European front.

Lord Harcourt said that he searched the world for nearly a week and ultimately in a friendly country found the weapons required. A ship was dispatched from England, loaded with arms and ammunition, and sent to Cape Town. It reached its destination in sixteen days and the most critical period ever experienced by the Union of South Africa was virtually over.

Lord Harcourt, who was formerly Colonial Secretary, said that immediately after the British ultimatum to Germany expired at midnight, Aug. 4, 1914, he had cabled the fact to the whole Empire and before morning had received replies from the smallest and most distant centres. During the war, he reminded his hearers, England never lost a city even temporarily, although the Falkland Islands had been saved by a margin of only twenty-four hours.

Among the speakers of the evening were James William Lowther, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Walter Hume Long, Secretary of State for Colonies.

FRENCH IN OLD FAVORITES.

"Gringoire" and Moliere Farce of Quack Medicas Much Enjdyed.

A double bill was given at the French Theatre du Vieux Colombier last night, consisting of two old-time favorites—the first "Gringoire," a one-act romantic comedy by Theodore de Banville, and the second Molière's three-act farce, "Le Medecin Malgre Lui."

Charles Dullin, who played in both performances, appeared to best advantage as Gringoire, the ragged and famished rebel poet who almost lost his life by reciting, for the price of a good meal, the ballad of revolution he had written against Louis XI.—one of his auditors, unknown to him, being Louis XI. himself. Instead of the rope, however, the beggar poet, "brave as a Captain and gentle as a woman," ends by winning at the King's instance the hand of the pretty, rich, and romantic royal ward, winning first her heart, despite his own wretched poverty and ugliness through the splendid eloquent fervor of his rebel passion for the oppressed, and the bravery of sacrifice with which, having won it, he would renounce it rather than draw her from her own high estate.

There was never so poetic a touch in the good old farce of Molière but it was well and heartily received, with its splendid and mostly uproarious satire upon the type of quack medicos of the time of Louis XIV., who cured non-existent ills with a non-existent medicine and with applications of meaningless Latin gibberish, paraphernalia of sorcery and the terms of alchemy, and the dead among whose patients never blamed them.

The central picaresque character of Sganerelle, the "doctor in spite of himself," was splendidly acted by Louis Jouvet, a great boisterous hulk of a fagot-gatherer, as also was the shrewish part of Jane Lory as Martine, the vindictive and buxom wife, who revenges herself for a beating and brings about Sganerelle's adoption into the medical profession by secretly recommending him as the most skilled among medical men, provided his modesty in confessing his profession be first overcome with copious applications of a hickory club. The vociferous horseplay, buffoonery and liberal seventeenth century indecency on the side was included with almost literal faithfulness in the play last night. Even in the twentieth century, however, it scarcely missed a single laugh.

GARFIELD'S REBUFF OF HYLAN TAKEN UP

Senate Committee Will Weigh Objections to New York's Coal Inventory.

TOLD OF WASTE AT MINES

Investigators Ask Why Producers Neglect Culm and Refuse in Fuel Emergencies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Failure of coal-producing agencies to utilize culm banks or waste coal to relieve the fuel shortage, and Fuel Administrator Garfield's objection to Mayor Hylan's inventory last month of New York City's coal supply, were subjects of inquiry today by the Senate Committee investigating the fuel situation.

J. B. Neale, Director of Production for the Fuel Administration and owner of anthracite properties, told the committee he knew of no alleged understanding among mine owners to keep culm off the market as a means of maintaining high prices.

The committee asked that letters of Fuel Administrator Garfield to Mayor Hylan, objecting to New York's inventory of its coal supply, be produced, and Fuel Administration officials agreed to present them tomorrow.

Figures were given to the committee by Mr. Neale showing an increase of 1,183,447 tons in anthracite shipments for the first six months of this year as compared with a similar period for 1917, although production from last April 1 to Nov. 16 fell off somewhat due to the influenza epidemic.

Seventy-five per cent. of the anthracite properties were owned by railroad companies, Mr. Neale told the committee, in answer to questions from Senator Reed as to whether the railroad-owned mines engaged in fixing prices, which other mines were compelled to meet. Mr. Neale said there was no such understanding, and that occasionally, if the outside mine owners had an over supply, they cut the prices published by the railroads.

BOLIVIA REASSERTS CLAIM.

Occupying Great Chaco Zone, Also Claimed by Paraguay.

LA PAZ, Oct. 25, (Correspondence of Associated Press.)—The influx of American capital into the central republics of South America for the development of vast areas of hitherto untouched resources has caused Bolivia and Paraguay to awaken to a realization of the possibilities that lie in the disputed zone which is known as the Great Chaco.

The boundary between these two republics never has been fixed definitely because of the wildness of the country, but both nations have been satisfied with going on record as claiming all the zone, and then going about their daily business without forcing the issue. Now that great development companies from the United States are seeking concessions, the newspapers and public men are urging that the old question be brought up for final settlement.

The Great Chaco is a vast area north of Argentina, between the Pilcomayo and Paraguay Rivers. It is claimed by both Bolivia and Paraguay, though both admit that their claims are so large that they will have to give up large areas in the final reckoning.

For several years Bolivia has been preparing quietly for the day of settlement, so that she is now in a position to press the issue to advantage. That country has constructed a chain of forts at intervals of twenty miles, in direct wireless communication with La Paz, has put its army in possession of the strip, and settled back to wait for the argument which now appears to be approaching.

DIFFER ON RAW MATERIALS.

Americans in London Point Out Lack of Policy by Allies.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The after-war business problem receiving the most important attention at present in England is that of the control of raw materials and shipping, says a statement issued by the American Chamber of Commerce in London. It adds:

"Detailed studies of sources and methods of control and distribution are being made, but there does not yet appear to be agreement on the general principles of control. On the one hand powerful interests are urging immediate co-operation between Great Britain, Fraance, and the United States, for the formation of a world control which will, at the appropriate time, be able to distribute raw materials as seems best. On the other hand some are pointing out that such action would in principle be contrary to President Wilson's policy of 'no economic combination within the League of Nations.'

"World arrangements are already being made with the sanction and even the assistance of the British Government in regard to oil and metals, while shipping plans change or develop daily. The American Chamber of Commerce in London has urged commercial bodies in America to consider the entire subject."

SOLDIERS STORM SOCIALIST MEETING

wore red sweaters, and several hundred of the men wore red neckties, which won beatings for many of them from soldiers after the meeting. Many women wore their hats swathed with red cloth and wore red sashes around their waists. The men who did not have red neckties usually defied Mayor Hylan by having red rosettes or red ribbons in their buttonholes. Abraham Beckerman, the Socialist Alderman, who appeared with a large red bow in the lapel of his coat, said: "We are thankful to Mayor Hylan for popularizing this color."

Undue emphasis on the color was opposed by those in charge of the meeting, who rebuked the displayers of the red banner and begged them to turn their serious attention to the principles involved and not to the optical symbol. Nearly every speaker pleaded with the audience to respect the law, and, as if by a prearranged plan, all called upon the audience to recognize that policemen, who were scattered every few feet through the audience, were there in response to orders duly delivered by the administration which had received a majority of the votes at the last election.

The speeches also were mild and well within the law. The speakers had ample warning that anything in conflict with the sedition law would be prosecuted, because stenographers were present taking down everything that was said, while Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke, Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, and other representatives of the Government were near the platform watching for any false step.

The most critical time for the personal safety of the 10 000 Socialists at the meeting was after it had broken up, when several hundred soldiers and sailors with clubs, whose offensive against the hall had been stopped by the police, were waiting outside the police lines for wearers of red insignia.

Before the night was over this group of men in uniform had drawn to their ranks most of their fellows in the city between Madison Square and Forty-second Street. After their early peaceful attempt to enter the already overcrowded building had been balked, they formed in good order and marched up Fifth Avenue, sending scouts along the sidewalk, who stopped private soldiers and sailors and said:

"Fall in. We are going to break up a meeting of Socialists who are attacking the flag."

After marching up Fifth Avenue to Forty-second Street a number of parties went over to Broadway, bringing in recruits, and they had an army of about five hundred when they got back to Madison Square. Here they held an open-air meeting, at which patriotic speeches were made by men in uniform, until they decided upon the attack on the building, which might have been successful if they had a leader who knew the terrain well enough to direct them to a different entrance.

After the police cavalry had moved them a block away from the hall, they made no further attempt to break through the police lines, but they kept their army mobilized at Twenty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue waiting for the meeting to break up and the crowd to come out. In the meantime, two men were caught wearing red neckties, not because they were Socialists, but because such was their taste in ties. They got a few knocks before they were able to convince the crowd of their non-Socialist sentiments.

Inspector Daly, who was in charge of the police, tried to get the crowd safely away by marching them eastward in Twenty-sixth Street to Lexington Avenue, while the police amused the soldiers and sailors at Twenty-fifth Street. The soldiers and sailors met this strategy, as soon as they discovered it, by running east to Lexington and Third Avenues to deal with groups of Socialists after they had advanced beyond their police convoy.

A mounted policeman came galloping up to give word to Inspectors Daly and Nolan that some hot fighting was threatened at this quarter. Mounted policemen and foot men were sent to the spot. They found several Socialists being roughly handled, but most of them had taken advantage of the period of safety, while they were being shepherded east by the police, to remove and throw away their red identification marks.

Inspector Daly then re-formed his police lines and marked out a westward route for the Socialists leaving the meeting, taking them in the opposite direction from that in which the soldiers and sailors were mopping up the groups of men no longer under police guard. The Socialists from the meeting scattered at Broadway in all directions, some taking the precaution to move further westward, and practically all divesting themselves of the patches of color which they had worn gaily at the meeting.

The things which aroused the greatest applause at the meeting were Scott Nearing's call for amnesty for breakers of the espionage law, which he stands accused of breaking; Nearing's appeal to the President to withdraw at once our troops from Russia and to recognize the Bolshevist Government; Judge Jacob Panken's declaration that the first flag of the American Republic was one of solid red, and his statement that he would rather follow Patrick Henry than Mayor Hylan; Alderman Algernon Lee's assertion that the time when this country would join the Socialists of Germany, Austria, and Russia in revolt was not far off, and resolutions favoring a general strike as a protest against the execution of sentence on Mooney and tendering congratulations and promises of imitation to the Socialists of Germany.

OLDER FLOORED BY FICKERT.

San Francisco Editor Had Assailed Mooney Prosecutor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—An assault was committed last night on Fremont Older, editor of The San Francisco Call and Post, by District Attorney Charles M. Fickert, in connection with recent publicity in the Mooney case, the editor being knocked down by the District Attorney. The Call recently published a long report of alleged crookedness in civil and criminal cases which involved Fickert and others.

Mr. Older today gave a statement to The Associated Press containing his version of the resignation of F. W. Henshaw from the State Supreme Court. The Henshaw matter was dealt with in the printed report to Secretary Wilson, signed by J. E. Densmore, Director General of Employment.

MAY STRIKE FOR MOONEY.

Hebrew Trades Council Will Vote on Protest Measure.

The United Hebrew Trades Council at its meeting held last night at 175 East Broadway decided to hold one or more public meetings in protest against the execution of Thomas J. Mooney. Later the council, which represents some 200 000 Jewish workers, will vote on the question of a protest strike. The council organized a committee shortly after Mooney's conviction, and it has held public meetings to arouse public opinion against the execution of Mooney.

After the regular meeting there was a conference with a committee from the Central Federated Union, after which it was announced that at a mass meeting of workers to be held in Cooper Union on Dec. 6, the principal speaker would be Frank D. Walsh. One form of labor's protest over the Mooney case will be a parade on Saturday, Dec. 7.

Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Association announced yesterday that members in all clothing and garment manufacturing centres of the United States and Canada would conduct demonstrations this week in behalf of Mooney.

The Amalgamated has rented twenty halls where "Mooney rallies" will be held and it is expected that 150,000 needle workers in this city will attend the meetings. General Secretary Joseph Schlossberg of the Amalgamated said the question of a general strike in support of the demands for justice for Mooney had not been considered by the Union, because 75,000 clothing workers in this city were conducting a general strike for the eight hour day.

It was announced that the Central Federated Union is arranging for a mass meeting of protest to be held in Cooper Union. Secretary Ernest Bohm said the matter of a general Mooney strike in this city would depend upon the international officers.

Five thousand waiters, cooks, and storeroom girls employed in leading restaurants of the city early this morning empowered the General Strike Committee of the International Federation of Hotel Employes to call a strike to enforce demands for wage increases. The waiters and cooks in hotels took similar action last Wednesday night.

The Waiters' Union sent representatives yesterday to Police Headquarters, where application was made for a permit for a parade of waiters on Thanksgiving Day. Decision as to the granting of the permit was reserved.

Kroonnok's Diary

THIS is the diary or calendar of an Eskimo hunter. In the border around the edge is his accounting of time—the straight strokes for the week days with a cross for Sundays. The pictures are the record of his year's hunting and include deer of various sorts, a polar bear, walrus, large and small seal, and fish.

The Revillon agent with whom he trades is a Frenchman who stays at his post on the Northeastern shore of Hudson's Bay for periods of three years with a three months' furlough to France at the end of each period. This agent lives among Eskimos and sees white people only once a year for a few days when the steamer brings provisions and takes away the furs.

MARKETS OF ITALY OURS FOR THE ASKING

Ambassador Tells Export Association American Trade Will Be Welcomed.

HAILS ERA OF COMPETITION

Tells of Great Progress in Agriculture and Industry at Home Since the War Began.

Count V. Macchi Di Cellere, Italian Ambassador to the United States, speaking yesterday at a luncheon given in his honor by the American Manufacturers' Export Association at the McAlpin, assured the 300 representatives of big manufacturing concerns interested in overseas trade that the Italian market would be open to American enterprise "under the most favorable auspices."

H. S. Demarest presided, and in introducing the Ambassador paid tribute to the high ideals held by Italy, as evidenced by that country's action in repudiating membership in the Triple Alliance, and taking its place on the side of the free nations.

"If the part played by the industrial resources and instrumentalities of trade in the tremendous conflict just ended cannot be overestimated, Ambassador Di Cellere said, "we all certainly will agree that in the period of reconstruction that is now opening before us they will be dominating.

"The rôle reserved to trade in the era that will begin with the conclusion of peace will probably even surpass the expectations of the most optimistic, as it is doubtful whether we can now realise the full importance of the effect of the changes brought about by the war on the economic activities of nations in the near future."

The Ambassador said that in the light of pending trade developments it would seem that diplomats, who in the past were accustomed to concern themselves chiefly with "world power," from now on would have to "busy themselves with world commerce."

"When the time comes for the resumption of normal trade," the Ambassador continued, "the Italian market will be open to you under the most favorable auspices. The war which we fought side by side for the defense and triumph of our common ideals has cemented our common ideals—has cemented our old ties of friendship—and today the relations between our respective Governments and nations are the warmest and most cordial, I am gratified to say. Furthermore, as you know, the war has brought about a dislocation in the Italian external trade that is decidedly in your favor. Thus it is entirely left to you, gentlemen, to see that you secure to American exports the place you feel that they should have in the Italian market.

"That success may crown your efforts in the Italian market is my great hope and desire, as that will contribute in no small degree to that intensification of trade exchanges between our countries which, since my arrival in the United States, it has been my constant endeavor to bring about."

The Ambassador gave it as his view that competition in the era to follow the end of the war would not disappear. "To my mind a free and fair competition is essential to a sane structure either of domestic or international trade," he said. He added that competition, when it followed its natural course, was most useful, inasmuch as it compelled that progress, that evolution in methods of production and distribution, which he held to be the very life of a sound economic edifice.

Italy's representative said that not much had been heard in this country of the "marvelous improvement in agricultural methods and of the splendid development and achievements obtained in the industrial field in Italy." While the war had laid great burdens upon Italy, he held that his country had gained "immaterial wealth," the benefit of which, enormous during the war, would surely be felt for a long time after the conclusion of peace.

The Ambassador called attention to the fact that the capital stock of companies in Italy increased over $260,000,000 in the year 1917, and about $230,000,000 in the first six months of this year, quite unprecedented, he said, in the history of Italian stock companies. Despite the war, savings bank deposits showed large gains. In view of this showing, the Ambassador predicted an era of intense economic activity in Italy during the reconstruction period. He indicated that, freed from the peril of Austrian invasion, a big development might be expected in Northern Italy, in which Americans might share. He suggested that Italy's ports offered advantages for the transhipment of American merchandise destined for countries bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, and in closing warned American exporters not to rely upon European agencies to sell their goods in Italy, but to station their own representatives in that country.

G. B. Ceccato, Italian Commercial Delegate to the United States, followed the Ambassador, and after tracing Italy's agricultural and manufacturing progress, assured the association that his services were at the disposal of exporters in seeking the markets of Italy.

Among those present were F. Quattrone, Italian High Commissioner to the United States; R. Tritoni, Consul General of Italy in New York, and Major M. Serratio of the Italian Army.

POLICE AFTER MILK FRAUDS.

Mayor Calls on Health Department Also to Have Inspectors Help.

It was announced yesterday by District Attorney Edward Swann that the city's investigation into milk prices would take the form of a John Doe inquiry. It will begin on Wednesday of next week in the Criminal Courts Building and Chief Magistrate McAdoo will preside.

Mayor Hylan wrote two letters on the subject yesterday. One was to Police Commissioner Richard Enright, calling on the police to support the city's efforts to uncover a conspiracy, and the other was to Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland asking the co-operation of his department. In his letter to the Police Commissioner the Mayor asked that Deputy Commissioner Lahey, in charge of the Detective Bureau, have charge of the police end of the inquiry, to "the end that the milk conspiracy may be given a thorough airing so that the public may know the methods resorted to by the Dairymen's League and milk distributers' trust to extort exorbitant prices from the people."

"If this is done," the Mayor continued, "some of the milk profiteers will be given an outing up the river where they may have an opportunity to rest and reflect upon the methods they have resorted to to deprive the children of this city of sufficient milk to keep them alive."

NAVAL ESTIMATES CUT $1,180,315,000

Daniels Still Recommends 3-Year Building Program of 156 Warships.

MANY CONTRACTS VOIDED

Largest Reduction in Ordnance Bureau, Which Has Canceled Orders of Nearly $500,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Naval estimates for 1920 have been reduced $1,180,315,000 as the result of the signing of the armistice. This information was conveyed to Secretary McAdoo today by Secretary Daniels. The original estimate on a war basis was $2,644,307,000, and this has been reduced to $1,463,992,000.

No reduction was made in the estimate of $600,000,000 for a second three-year building program of 156 ships, which has been recommended to Congress by Secretary Daniels. This program contemplates ten superdreadnoughts, six battle cruisers, and 140 smaller warships and auxiliary craft.

The largest reduction was $313,421,716, in the estimate for the Bureau of Ordnance, and the second largest was $275,324,285 in pay of the navy. Other reductions were announced as follows:

Pay, miscellaneous, $5,015,000.
Aviation, navy, $138,770,700.
Bureau of Navigation, $4,036,603.
Bureau of Yards and Docks, including public works, $9,458,000.
Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, $224,951,315.
Bureau of Construction and Repair, $37,500,000.
Bureau of Steam Engineering, $28,000,000.
Marine Corps, $35,702,054.
Naval emergency fund, $118,145,000.

The House Naval Committee is now holding hearings on the 1920 naval bill, and the reduced estimates will probably be transmitted to it within a day or two. Members of the committee have been insistent that the bill's total must be cut to the very lowest figure consistent with the operation and upbuilding of the navy.

Contracts amounting to $19,051,000, including those for 300 hydroaeroplanes and naval supplies, have been canceled by the Navy Department since the signing of the armistice. This information was given today by Rear Admiral Peoples to the House Naval Committee. Other cancellations would probably exceed $100,000,000, Admiral Peoples said, in addition to approximately $500,000,000 canceled by the Naval Ordnance Bureau.

Rear Admiral McGowan, Paymaster General, reduced his estimates for supplies, including pay of the navy, from $971,000,000 to $466,000,000.

JEROME IN CHARGE OF BENNETT TRUST

Appointed in Late Editor's Place on Application of Latter's Sister.

Brother Made No Accounting, According to Lawyer, but Paid Her $40,000 a Year.

On the application of Mrs. Jeannette Bennett Bell, widow of Isaac Bell of this city, and sister of the late James Gordon Bennett, owner of The New York Herald and The Evening Telegram, who died at his villa at Beaulieu, France, on May 14 last, William Travers Jerome was appointed by Surrogate Cohalan yesterday as trustee, as successor to the second Bennett, of the trust estate of Mrs. Bell, created by the will of the first James Gordon Bennett. By the terms of the elder Bennett's will the residue of his estate was equally divided between his son, Jams Gordon Bennett, and his daughter, Jeannette Bennett Bell, Mrs. Bell to have the use of the income of her half for life, and the principal to revert, in equal shares, to her three children. These are Isaac Bell, who lives at Kilkenny, Ireland; Norah Ricardo, wife of Major Ricardo of the British Army, and Henrietta d'Aramon, wife of Count Paul d'Aramon of the French Army.

The application, which was made for Mrs. Bell by Harland G. Tibbetts of the office of Jerome, Rand & Kressel, was supported by a further request for Mr. Jerome's appointment by Mrs. Ricardo, and Mr. Tibbetts informed the Surrogate that similar requests from Mrs. Bell's other two children were on the way to this side of the ocean. Mrs. Bell is now living in Surrey, England. Mr. Jerome qualified as trustee by putting up a bond for $600,000 supplied by the National Surety Company.

Mr. Jerome and Mrs. Bell have been friends from childhood, and, when her brother died, she retained the former District Attorney to represent her in any matters that needed the attention of a lawyer in connection with the settlement of her brother's estate. Mr. Tibbetts said last night that the amount of the trust estate was estimated at between $600,000 and $700,000. Up to the time of the death of the younger Bennett, Mr. Tibbetts said, Mrs. Bell had been receiving a regular annual income from her brother of $40,000 a year. The newspaper properties owned by Mr. Bennett, Mr. Tibbetts added, were in no way involved in the trust estate.

Mr. Bennett, according to Mr. Tibbetts, never made any accounting of his trusteeship. He simply paid an annual income to his sister and she, apparently, was quite satisfied. In his own will Mr. Bennett left Mrs. Bell $50,000 and made no other provision for her, because, in the language of the will, "she is already amply provided for." To each of Mrs. Bell's children, however, Mr. Bennett gave annuities—to Isaac Bell, $20,000; to Mrs. Ricardo, $10,000, and to the Countess d'Aramon, $10,000. On the death of their mother they are to share equally, under the will of the elder Bennett, in the principal of the trust estate.

When Mr. Tibbetts was asked last evening, Mr. Jerome not being available, of what the trust estate consisted, he said that, as he understood it, the trust estate consisted of personal bonds issued by the younger Bennett and secured by mortgage on real estate which he owned in and about New York. The younger Bennett left two wills, which have been designated as the American will and the French will. In the American will Mr. Bennett made the following reference to the French will: "I intend to leave at my death a will disposing of all my real and personal property situated in the Republic of France, and this will is not intended to in any way affect or dispose of any property situated in France, disposed by such other will, but it is my intention by this will to dispose of all property not disposed of by such will, which, at the time of my death, shall belong to me or be subject to my disposal by will."

The understanding among some of Mr. Bennett's friends in this country seems to have been that the estate disposed of by the French will was much larger than that disposed of by the American will, and that his wife, who was formerly the widow of Baron George de Reuter of Reuter's Telegraph Company, and her son, Ronald de Reuter, inherited most of the estate in France. The French will has never been published in this country. Under the American will Mrs. Bennett received an anuity of $50,000 a year in lieu of her dower and right of dower "in all of my real estate situated in the State of New York or elsewhere in the United States of America." Under the American will Ronald de Reuter received an annuity of $20,000.

Cables to Son in Havana He Is Not Seeking Cuban Presidency.

General Jose Miguel Gomez, former President of Cuba and leader of the last revolution there, gave out a statement yesterday at his home at 182 West Fifty-eighth Street, denouncing as spurious the announcements in the Havana newspapers that he had decided to run for President of Cuba in the next elections. He denied that he had written a letter that might be construed as an announcement that he was a candidate.

He cabled also to his son in Havana to publish in the newspapers there that he had not written a letter to a friend announcing that American Government officials would not interpose objections to his candidacy, and he added: "Nor have I had any interview with any American official."

The Commercial Cable Company announced yesterday that commercial and personal cable messages to persons in the districts in Belgium set free by the allied troops again would be accepted for transmission "at risk and peril of senders, subject to censorship and delay." The service will be resumed immediately after a long lapse due to war conditions.

COMMITTEE ADOPTS 1920 TAX PROVISION

Amendment Specifying $4,000,000,000 Revenue Approved by Vote of Democratic Senators.

REPUBLICANS AGAINST IT

Allege Attempt to Prevent Extra Session and Threaten Defeat of Pending Revenue Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—By a party vote the Senate Finance Committee today declared in favor of the amendment urged by W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, to provide for a $4,000,000,000 tax yield for 1920, as a part of the war revenue measure now before the committee. The Democratic members all voted in favor and the Republicans against putting the $4,000,000,000 tax amendment in the measure.

Under the bill as favored by the Democrats the yield for 1919 would be $6,000,000,000, while the appropriation for 1920 would be $4,000,000,000, although not worked out as to detail for 1920. The Democrats propose that the definite tax items for 1920 be made up at the regular session of Congress a year from now.

The Republican members of the committee asserted tonight that the Democrats, in attempting to include the 1920 tax yield in the war revenue measure, were trying to pave the way for abandoning any idea of an extra session of Congress next March. With no revenue legislation in sight, the Democrats, according to the Republican viewpoint, hoped to keep Congress from meeting until the regular session.

Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, promised the Republican Senators that he would have a rough draft of the 1920 revenue amendment ready for the committee tomorrow. The Republicans will wait for it before deciding upon any plan to defeat it in the Senate when the war revenue measure comes up there.

The reason for putting the $4,000,000,000 revenue amendment in the present bill, according to Senator Simmons, is simply to give corporations and individuals an opportunity to know approximately how much tax they will be called upon to pay in 1920.

Republican members of the committee predicted tonight that if the amendment for 1920 were insisted upon by the Democratic majority it would mean the defeat of the revenue bill in the Senate. They intend to fight for a revenue bill that embraces taxes for 1919 alone. The 1920 tax yield, they insist, must be provided for in another bill next year. The Republicans do not intend, they say, to allow the Democrats to keep Congress from going into session next March. They maintain that an extra session will be imperative to deal with after-the-war legislation.

"The Democrats have offered a theoretical measure for 1920 revenue," said Senator Penrose, who is slated for the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee on the reorganization of Congress by the Republicans. "There is no logical reason why it should be made a part of the 1919 bill. In fact, it has no business there whatever. How are we to know now what the revenue requirements are to be in 1920? We may need $8,000,000,000, or we may need $5,000,000,000.

"This War Revenue bill, if loaded down with the 1920 amendment, will not pass the Senate. Of that I am sure. The Republicans are intent on seeing that adequate war revenue legislation is passed, but they will not accept an irrelevant piece of legislation such as this 1920 rider."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Revision of the special miscellaneous tax rates in the War Revenue bill was completed today by the Senate Finance Committee. In amending the special taxes, the committee determined to make no increase in the present tax on amusement admissions. The House provision increasing the admission tax to two cents on each ten cents paid was reduced to one cent, the rate of the existing law. The committee also reduced from 10 to 5 per cent. the rate on receipts of lessors and licensees of moving-picture films.

WRECK BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Lewis Says Evidence Involves High Official of B. R. T.

Without waiting for the close of the John Doe investigation by Mayor John F. Hylan, as a sitting Magistrate, to fix responsibility for the Malbone Street tunnel disaster on the Brighton Beach line of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in which nearly a hundred persons lost their lives, on Nov. 1, District Attorney Harry E. Lewis yesterday submitted the matter to the Kings County Grand Jury for its consideration. Although Mr. Lewis would not divulge his plans, it is said that he feels confident of obtaining indictments against at least two persons high in the management of the railroad. Indictments are expected to be returned either late this week or early next week.

After the proceedings before the Grand Jury were well under way, District Attorney Lewis left Assistant District Attorney Herbert N. Warbasse in charge of questioning witnesses, and hurried to the office of Mayor Hylan, where he was closeted with the Mayor for more than an hour. When he returned to Brooklyn the District Attorney asserted that although the decision to lay the question of responsibility for the disaster before the Grand Jury was rather sudden, the Mayor was in hearty accord with his action.

"The Mayor and I discussed freely certain phases of the evidence," said Mr. Lewis. "We also discussed certain sections of the law applicable to the case."

When asked if any of the officials of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company would be held responsible for the wreck, Mr. Lewis said:

"I believe the evidence criminally involves some one high up in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. Who I will not say."

Many passengers on the wrecked train and employes of the B. R. T. appeared as witnesses before the Grand Jury. Among the latter were William Brody, trainmaster at the Culver Depot at Coney Island; Wilbur Lewis, chief instructor of motormen, and Joseph McCann, instructor of motormen. Brody and McCann at the John Doe proceedings before Mayor Hylan testified that Thomas Blewitt, Division Superintendent, was responsible for sending out Andrew Luciana, as motorman of the ill-fated train. Luciana was present in the County Court House, but it is not believed that he will be called as a witness. Mrs. Luciana, his wife, was with him, and although subpoenaed was not called as a witness. The Grand Jury proceedings will be continued today.

The fact that the Grand Jury has taken up the matter will not interfere with the John Doe proceedings before Mayor Hylan. These will be continued today, but are expected to come to an end by this evening or early tomorrow. At the close of this hearing the District Attorney may ask for warrants for arrests or he may ask Mayor Hylan to reserve his decision in the matter pending the outcome of the hearing before the Grand Jury. It is thought that the latter course is the one more likely to be pursued.

Sugar-Saving Desserts

Jiffy-Jell makes instant desserts which are rich and fruity.

It comes ready-sweetened.

The fruit-made flavors come in liquid form, in vials. So they keep their fresh-fruit taste.

One package serves six people in mold form, or 12 if you whip the jell. So these luscious desserts are also economical.

$203,179,038 TOTAL OF WAR WORK FUND

Largest Sum Ever Provided by Voluntary Offerings, Says Director General Mott.

ALL STATES END OVER TOP

New York Teams in Great Drive Go Within $370,097 of Quota Completed by Two Rockefellers.

A total of $203,179,038 was contributed to the United War Work Campaign for the seven accredited war work agencies. "The result is the largest sum ever provided through voluntary offerings in the history of mankind," said Dr. John R. Mott, Director General of the campaign, in making public the figures last evening.

The amount sought was $170,500,000. The amount raised included contributions from the States, foreign countries, the army and navy, and insular possessions. Every State went "over the top." Fourteen States pledged 150 per cent. or more. Arizona heads the list with 248 per cent. of its quota.

New York City raised its quota of $35,000,000. The drive in this city was short approximately three and a quarter million dollars last Thursday, and guarantors promised to underwrite one-half of the deficit if the campaign workers raised the other half. At the meeting of the team captains and the heads of the various divisions at the Hotel Biltmore yesterday afternoon it was announced that the four additional days of canvassing resulted in an increase of $2,900,000 toward the quota in this city. This made the deficit $370,097. Not until the end of the meeting was it learned that the guarantors of the deficit were John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The report for all the teams and divisions in New York for the last four days of the campaign amounted to $2,874,772. Of this the Industrial Division raised $820,473, and Brooklyn was next with $743,042. The thirty teams raised $581,462 in the last extension of the campaign.

The amount of money raised in the drive was approximately the same as that raised in the second Red Cross campaign, when previous records for similar campaigns were broken. Of the grand total $194,035,107 represents subscriptions actually made, including the amount given by the Rockefellers to make up New York's deficit. The remaining $9,135,000 is the aggregate amount anticipated from Philadelphia and other "war chest" cities and yet to be officially and formally pledged.

Dr. Mott Amazed at Result.

Dr. John R. Mott, director general of the campaign, made the following comment on the drive:

"The campaign is over and the result is the largest sum ever provided through voluntary offerings in the history of mankind. When the unfavorable circumstances which attended this great effort are borne in mind, the result becomes all the more remarkable. No great campaign was ever preceded by such a brief preparation. Even the scant two months left for this purpose were cut into for three weeks by the Fourth Liberty Loan, and, near the threshold of the campaign itself, by a general Congressional election.

More serious still was the nation-wide spread of the deadly influenza epidemic, which had a death toll of twice as many lives as America has laid down in the war. The speaking program had virtually to be abandoned.

"The signing of the armistice, which thrilled and absolutely absorbed the minds and hearts of the people, claimed initial day of the campaign with its spontaneous celebrations. In addition, certain States devoted the following day to a peace holiday. The confused or conflicting statements regarding the policy of demobilization as given out near the close of the campaign undoubtedly constituted another handicap, notwithstanding the clear and satisfying deliverances on the subject which were made by the War Department.

Thanks All Who Contributed.

"The campaign has furnished the most impressive example thus far afforded of religious unity and co-operation. When before have the leaders and the many millions of followers of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jew... religious bodes of a great nation joined forces for the accomplishment of a common, unselfish object? The campaign has generated in many a community an atmosphere of truer understanding—an atmosphere in which men come to look to differ and to determine to understand. It is a great thing for any people when, without weakening or sacrificing any vital principles, they make up their minds or resolve that they will seek to understand those from whom they may have conscientiously differed.

"To all who have so generously given of their time and effort, from the President and his associates to the humblest giver, the Campaign Committee sends thanks, not for itself but for those to whom the gifts will mean so much in these next crucial months, the brave men of our army and navy."

A mark of army and navy appreciation of the work of the seven organizations involved is found in the total gift to the fund from the officers and men in the ranks of $618,346. Admiral T. J. Cowie, in charge of the drive in the navy, has wired national campaign headquarters as follows:

"The contribution of the navy to the United War Work Campaign has passed $300,000, and because of this record Secretary Daniels has wired and radioed the following to every ship and station: 'The navy has given more than $300,000 to the United War Work Campaign. This is an achievement which ranks high among the great things which the American Navy has done in this war. The great gift of the navy, in addition to actually adding many thousands of dollars to the total, served as an incentive to the rest of the country. I take the utmost pride in this remarkable evidence of the willingness of the navy to help whenever it is called upon, and I send my sincere thanks to the men and women of the American Navy who have answered my appeal.'"

Many Organizations Helped.

Bruce Barton, Chairman of the Publicity Committee, thanked the newspapers and the press associations for their co-operation, in the following statement issued last night:

"The Campaign Committee is under special obligations to the newspapers of the country, which gave so freely of their space and influence, as they have given in every great patriotic effort of the war. We know something of the problems that have confronted newspaper publishers by reason of the war, and their generous contribution to a cause like this is all the more noteworthy on that account. Without their help the final result would have been impossible. The committee gratefully recognizes its obligation, and is glad of this opportunity to make public acknowledgment of it."

At the Biltmore Hotel meeting yesterday a subscription of $3,000 was reported by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as a thank offering for the safety of three brothers now in the service.

Workers in the campaign expressed their appreciation of the leadership of Mr. Rockefeller and the efficiency he manifested throughout the campaign. Mr. Rockefeller, responding, acknowledged the splendid co-operation that had been shown throughout the entire organization.

At New York campaign headquarters the workers in the organization were grieved yesterday in learning of the death of Carter Childs, one of the Executive Committee of the Brooklyn Division and active in the publicity for that borough. Mr. Childs's death occurred after a very brief illness. Until he was taken sick, he was one of the most active and effective workers in the entire campaign.

Glass jars placed in United Cigar Stores in Greater New York in which the company deposited 1 cent with each sale for the benefit of the War Work Fund drive yielded 1,007,400 pennies. The plan was carried out throughout the country, and many millions of pennies were garnered. Just how many pennies were collected in the United States is not known, as the returns will not be in for several days.

HOW GRAND TOTAL WAS WON.

Final Figures of Campaign Show Gifts Were Worldwide.

7,000 OF OUR TROOPS ARE ON WAY HOME

Gen. March Identifies Units Due Here This Week on Three Transports.

MAJORITY IN AIR SERVICE

Britain's Need for Ships to Carry Her Own Soldiers Will Retard Americans' Return.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—General March, as Chief of Staff, late this afternoon identified the units of the vanguard of nearly 7,000 members of the American Expeditionary Force which sailed from Liverpool on Friday, and is now on the high seas en route to New York on the transports Minnekahda, Lapland, and Orca.

General March said that these vessels were expected to arrived in New York "about the end of the month," which means that they are due in New York by the end of this week. When they sailed from Liverpool it was hoped that they might reach New York City in time for Thanksgiving Day. Most of the units returning on these transports are identified with the army air service. The total number of persons being returned is 372 officers, 4 nurses, and 6,514 enlisted men, and other ranks.

Secretary Baker said today that the War Department expected to experience no difficulty in finding ships with which to bring back American troops from Europe.

"We have been using a very large amount of British tonnage," said the Secretary. "The British Government is now confronted with the problem of moving Canadian, New Zealand, and Australian troops home, and it would not be fair to ask them to employ their whole troop-carrying capacity in our troop movement service. Their troops have also been in France longer than have our troops.

"We will, therefore, have less British tonnage available for our own troop movement. In addition to such British ships as will be available we will have our own tonnage, the newly built tonnage of the United States Shipping Board, the American transatlantic liners, the ships that we took from the Germans. Besides that we will have the new ships which the Shipping Board will be constantly turning out. We will also have some Dutch ships, some Italian and French ships, and also some outside ships for use in the troop movement."

The ships which sailed from Liverpool on Nov. 22 for New York and the troops they carry are as follows:

20,000 to Come from England.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—General March's announcement today regarding homeward-bound soldiers on the Minnekahda, Lapland, and Orca means that the movement of the American troops now in England, the majority of whom are in air service detachments, will continue steadily until all of them, some 20,000, have returned to this country.

Before General March's announcement Secretary Baker had discussed with newspaper correspondents the return of American troops from France.

For the next several weeks Mr. Baker expects returning transports to be laden entirely with sick and wounded men and those not immediately available for military service, such as the men who have been discharged from hospitals in France, but who have not fully recovered their strength.

Secretary Baker also revealed today that in conference with Lord Reading it had been agreed that payment to be made by either Government to the other for transport service would be made on the basis that no profit was to accrue to Great Britain or the United States.

Uruguay Honors the Allies.

MONTEVIDEO, Nov. 23.—The Uruguayan Government gave a dinner tonight in honor of the Entente Allies. There were present the President of Uruguay, the Diplomatic Staff of the Allies, and Government officials.

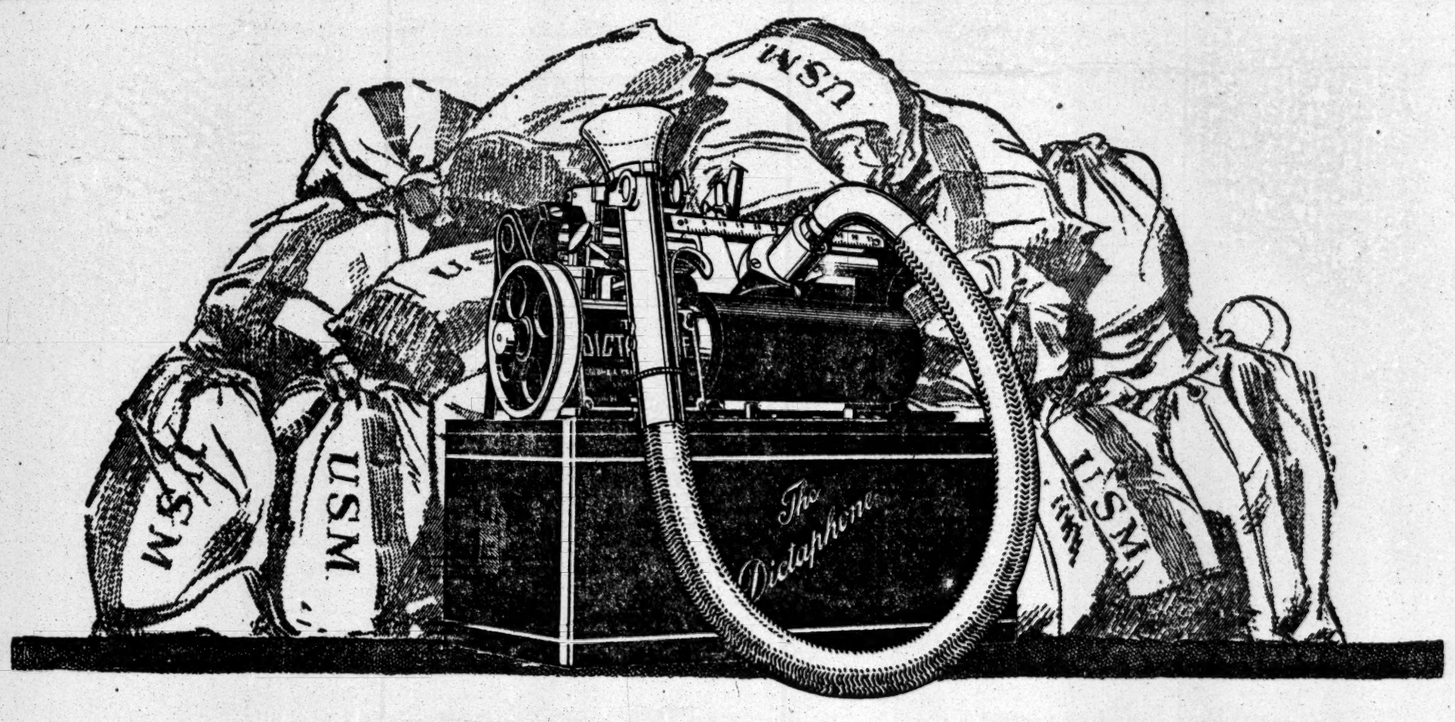
FOR RELIEF IN NEAR EAST.

Three New Yorkers on Committee Which Will Visit the Field.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—A committee of seven is to be informally incorporated by the Government to go to the Near East and prepare for the relief work the United States is to do in that part of the world. This statement was made here today, when leaders of the Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee met to plan for their $30,000,000 drive which is to be started in January.

The Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, Corresponding Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, is to be Chairman of the committee. The other members will be Professor Edward C. Moore of Harvard, Dr. W. W. Peet, for thirty-five years in Constantinople John H. T. Main, President of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa; Harold A. Hatch of New York, Justice Victor Dowling, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York.

This committee will precede a Government relief ship to the field. A medical unit will be among the first sent out, according to Dr. Barton.



Deduct one-third from the cost

The Dictaphone can save you from one-third to one-half the present cost of getting out your daily mail. It saves the many hours formerly lost in taking and waiting to take dictation.

Each operator does all of her letter-writing directly on the typewriter. Thus she can produce from 50% to 100% more letters per day at a reduced cost of at least one-third. No other modern office system or appliance "serves or saves" better than The Dictaphone.

The thousands of testimonials we've received prove that the average user—dictator or operator—wouldn't give up The Dictaphone for anything.

Allow us to place The Dictaphone on trial in your office, and we are sure that it will stay there. Because The Dictaphone instantly proves its worth in any kind of office, on any kind of correspondence. Phone or write today for a demonstration. No expense or obligation.

To Secretaries and Stenographers

If you already are turning out as many letters as you can, how can you improve your chances for better pay? Stop writing letters twice. Write them only once with the aid of The Dictaphone. That is the way to increase your value to your employer, and also make your position more important and profitable.

There is but one Dictaphone, trade-marked "The Dictaphone," made and merchandised by the Columbia Graphophone Co.

LIEUT. JOSEPH DUFF KILLED

Former Princeton Gridiron Star Was Promoted from the Ranks.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 25.—Lieutenant Joseph Duff, former all-American football guard and a noted gridiron star of many seasons, was killed in action in France on Oct. 10, according to word just received here by relatives. He was graduated from Princeton in 1912 and was named an all-American guard that year. He coached the Princeton 'Varsity team that Fall and the University of Pittsburgh elevens of 1913 and 1914.

Lieutenant Duff went to France as a private in a machine gun company, and got into action on Oct 1. He was promoted to a Corporal, then Sergeant, and later was graduated from the army candidate school and received his commission.

On the Canadian List.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 25.—The following names of Americans appear in today's overseas casualty list: Ill—V. Porter, Detroit; prisoner of war—B. Killeavy, New York City; gassed—F. Swinnerton, Tompkinsville, N. Y.; H. Weir, Sandusky, O.; H. Makowsky, Little Falls, N. Y.; wounded—W. Thomson, Philadelphia; L. Lange, Beaver, Penn.; R. Henderson, Detroit; A. Boynton, Detroit.

DENIES DUTCH EXPLANATION

Allies Notified Too Late About Limburg, Says French Agency.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The note issued by the Dutch Legation explaining that German troops were permitted to cross the Dutch province of Limburg in the interest of the Belgian population after agreement with allied representatives, the semi-official Havas Agency says, is inaccurate.

The allied representatives were asked to inform their respective Governments of the conditions of the authorization for the Germans to pass through Limburg. They expressed no opinion, the Havas Agency adds, inasmuch as they were told of the violation of neutrality only after the Germans had entered Limburg.

No Army Orders Issued.

MUSIC

Is as Indispensable in Celebrating our Glorious Victory as it Proved to be in Winning it

EVERY Commander has acknowledged his dependence on music for his army and now all the people in all the countries of the Allies are lifting up their voices in song and thanksgiving, midst tens of thousands of bands and in millions of homes, as the only means of giving expression to their ecstacy and joy.

The wonder of music lies in the fact that it gives a fuller and deeper expression to every human emotion and harmonizes with every occasion.

Think of the music which will fill every home and arise in every heart on this Thanksgiving Day. Think of the family gatherings around the piano and the phonograph all through the winter. Surely music was given us to be our companion in both our sorrow and joy.

LOCAL BASEBALL OWNER ADDS APPROVAL TO THE SELECTION OF W. H. TAFT AS LEADER OF GAME

RUPPERT IN FAVOR OF TAFT SELECTION

If Former President Accepts, Yankee Owner Thinks He Would Be Able Official.

DREYFUSS DEPLORES 'LEAK'

Pittsburgh Owner Says Western Club Owners Were to Have Been Consulted Before Announcement.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, President of the Yankees, spoke yesterday favorably of the action of Presidents Hempstead and Frazee in asking former President William H. Taft to consider a proposition to act as a one-man National Commission in baseball. Ruppert said that if Mr. Taft consented and could find the time to give to the various baseball controversies which arise, it would be a fine thing for the national game. In favoring the one-man commission idea, however, Ruppert had nothing to say about the ousting of Ban Johnson and August Herrmann from the game's highest tribunal.

Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburgh, who has been one of the leading figures in the recent baseball upheaval, announced yesterday in Pittsburgh that it was to be regretted that the proposition to Mr. Taft had "leaked" out. Mr. Dreyfuss was in that part of the country about a week ago, and at that time consulted all the club owners in the East on the proposition, and found them favorable. Dreyfuss said that it was understood among the club owners in the East that he should first confer with the Western club owners before any announcement was made.

"It was a case of some one," said Dreyfuss, "not being able to keep a secret under his hat."

Opposition to the plan has already cropped out in the Western section of the American League, where President Johnson has strong support. Phil Ball, the owner of the St. Louis Browns, is the first to openly oppose the idea. He announced yesterday that he had received a telegram from Hempstead and Frazee, asking him to wire Mr. Taft his approval.

"I did not wire Mr. Taft," said Ball. "I think Mr. Taft has the finest judicial mind in the country and is in all respects a great man. But I object to having Messrs. Frazee and Hempstead's plans wished on me in any offhand manner. Frazee has no authority from any one to submit such a proposition on behalf of the American League. Until the league meets and discusses any plan it obviously has no official standing. Any changes of policy will be effected at the leagues' meeting early in December."

Events of the last week have shown that the opposition to Ban Johnson has become unexpectedly strong. Baseball men yesterday did not hesitate to say that there would be a showdown at the American League meeting, with the Eastern clubs probably lined up against Johnson.

A decided change has taken place in the manner of Johnson's usual visits to this city. He was here in New York last week for several days, and on Sunday was at the hotel where he usually stops. He refused to see any one, however, and when it was announced in the papers yesterday that he was in the city, he immediately packed up and disappeared. Not one word was forthcoming from Johnson, which in itself denotes a rather surprising state of affairs. Johnson's silence at this time is said to be the result of an ultimatum which was sent him by American League club owners that he was no longer the official mouthpiece of the league on serious topics.

For many years Johnson has held absolute sway in his organization, but of late years, with the clubs coming into new ownership, there has been a tendency to curb Johnson's powers. The club owners have made it known to the President that they will exercise their own likes and dislikes in voicing the politics of the organization.

The fight over Johnson at the American League meeting next month promises to be the bitterest break that the American League club owners have ever had. Probably nothing official will be done about the request that has been made for a change in the makeup of the National Commission until the two big leagues act upon it officially.

Amateur Boxer Hurt in France.

Letters from France reaching this country yesterday disclosed to friends of John Gaddi, former national and metropolitan heavyweight and light-heavyweight champion boxer, that he had been wounded in action. Gaddi is reported injured in both arms and legs from shrapnel. He is in Base Hospital 12 in France. Gaddi before the war competed as an amateur boxer under the colors of the St. Bartholomew A. C.

KYRONEN QUITS LOCAL CLUB

Distance Runner to Compete in Title Race Unattached.

Villar Kyronen's career as a member of the Millrose A. A. has ended. Announcement of the early entries for the national senior cross-country championship race which will be held over the Van Cortlandt Park course Saturday, disclosed that the sturdy little Finnish runner had severed connection with the Millrose organization and had entered as unattached. No reason is ascribed for Kyronen's renouncing his club affiliation.

Kyronen joined the Millrose A. A. in 1915 after a brilliant career as a distance runner with the Kaleva A. C. He won a junior championship as a member of the Kaleva A. C., and in 1914 annexed the senior five-mile-run title under the colors of this organization. As a member of the Millrose A. A. Kyronen won the senior cross-country title in 1916, and in 1917 he took the national ten-mile run emblem.

No intimation is given as to whether Kyronen intends joining any other club, but his intentions in this matter will probably be made public shortly. Before he can assume club affiliation again Kyronen is compelled to compete as an unattached athlete for one year.

A promising field will array itself against Kyronen in the chase for the senior hill and dale title. Charles Foresi, national ten and five mile champion, will be a formidable contender, as will be Jimmy Henigan, of Fort Slocum, present titleholder, and Max Bohland of the Paulist A. C., who won the national junior title recently.

MAT BOUTS ON TONIGHT.

Stecher and Zbyszko to Meet in Benefit Show.

Wladek Zbyszko, Polish wrestler, and Joe Stecher of Nebraska are both reported in excellent condition for their catch-as-catch-can match to a decision at Madison Square Garden this evening. The bout will be one of a series arranged for the United War Work Campaign. This will mark the third meeting of these two grapplers. About one year ago they wrestled at Madison Square Garden without either receiving an official verdict. Subsequently Stecher gained a decision over Zbyszko in one hour at Omaha.

COMPANY C TEAM LEADS.

Through a victory over Company B, the basket ball team representing Company C forged to the lead last night in the City College S. A. T. C. intercompany basket ball tournament. The score was 14 to 11. At half time the Company B quintet was leading 6 to 5. In the second half, however, the Company C five braced and gradually assumed a lead which it maintained to the finish.

In another game Company A defeated Company D by 30 to 24. This contest furnished a comparatively easy victory for the Company A quintet, which led throughout. Joe Brandt was the leader in the Company A triumph. He caged seven field baskets.

CHUNG CHANG BEST AMONG PEKINGESE

Aristocratic Toy Dog Gains Honors at Red Star Charity Show at Imperial.

Chung Chang of Alderbourne, a winner at many Pekingese shows, carried off most of the honors at the sixth match show of the Pekingese Club of America at the Imperial Hotel yesterday. Chung Chang not only won the trophy in the open class, but was also winning dog and was then adjudged best in the show.

The competition was held for the benefit of the American Red Star Animal Relief. Mrs. A. B. Carmichael of Dorchester Centre, Mass., made her metropolitan début as a judge. The infusion of new judging talent in the local district brought out sixty-five dogs for a total of seventy-eight entries. Mrs. G. E. Engel's bitch, Rowena of Burton-on-Dee, was the best of opposite sex, going from novice up to winners in the classes for the gentle sex.

An American-bred bitch gave Mrs. Engel's importation a good run for the first prize in the bitch division. This was Mrs. A. McClure Halley's home-bred Sunlight of Llenrud, which took the prize for the best American bred. Mrs. Halley had a lot of success with many of her breeding, and, with Mrs. G. E. Engel and the Yankibourne Kennels, shared the chief honors of the show.

The awards follow:

Puppies, Bitches, over 3 and under 6 months.—First, Mrs. Thomas Hastings's Bagatelle Miss Doodels; second, Miss C. de la Torre Bueno's Alcelias Sing Kong of Llenrud; third, Mrs. Thomas Hastings's Bagatelle Ma Mai; fourth, Mrs. H. Stockert's Juen Sue.

SMITH TO START CYCLISTS.

Governor-Elect to Send Riders Away on Six-Day Journey.

Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith will start the six-day bicycle race which will be held at Madison Square Garden commencing Sunday at midnight. This announcement was made yesterday by the management of the grind.

Marcel Dupuy and Henri Gerwig, French cyclists, are expected to arrive here within forty-eight hours. Gerwig will be making his first American appearance. He is reputed to have created a creditable record in his two years' career as a rider on European tracks, among his achievements being successes over Dupuy, Oscar Egg, and other cyclists. Dupuy, unless he elects to ride with Gerwig, will be teamed with Frank Kramer, veteran champion sprinter.

PLAN CONTROL OF BOXING.

National Movement Under Way to Restore Sport in Public Favor.

Inspired by the suggestion from baseball that a one-man commission be installed to govern the sport, a national movement was started yesterday to apply this creation to amateur and professional boxing. It is proposed to have a single commissioner, of recognised standing, in all States where the sport is legalized. An appeal along these lines will be made to all Congressmen representing States where boxing bouts are permitted.

MIDDIES MAY PLAY PITT AT ANNAPOLIS

Admiral Eberle Favors Game for United War Fund on Academy Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 25.—In reply to a proposal of the United War Work Committee that the University of Pittsburgh should play the Naval Academy for the benefit of the fund in New York City, on Nov. 30 or Dec. 7, the Naval Academy authorities have suggested a game between the teams at Annapolis.

The suggestion was made directly by Rear Admiral Edward W. Eberle, Superintendent of the Naval Academy. It was further stated that an admission charge might be made. This has never been done at the Academy, but there is no objection under the circumstances.

The permanent stand at the Academy seats 7,300 persons, and there are temporary stands for about 3,000 more, while standing room could easily be found for six or eight thousand. It is certain that the grounds would be crowded by visitors from Baltimore, Washington, and other nearby points. Admiral Eberle is opposed to the brigade of midshipmen leaving Annapolis.

The Naval Academy team will rest for a day or two, but will get back training, and will be ready to resume practice if there is any chance of playing the game. Progress in the negotiations is awaited with great interest here.

Van Cortlandt Pros Win Match.

Frank Eastman and Frank Hunt, the Van Cortlandt Park professionals, defeated Willie Kerrigan and Jack Farrell of Siwanoy in a four-ball match yesterday over the links of the Siwanoy Country Club by 7 up and 5 to play. The victorious pair had a best ball of 67, against a 76 turned in by Kerrigan and Farrell. The best individual round was made by Eastman, who went over the course for a 71. Hunt had a 74, Kerrigan a 79, and Farrell an 83.

COLUMBIA HAS FINAL DRILL.

Coach Dawson's Charges in Good Shape for Syracuse Game.

Columbia had its final hard workout yesterday in preparation for the game with Syracuse on Thanksgiving Day. Every player on the squad reported, and although it was dark by the time Fred Dawson could muster them all on the playing field, the practice went on full tilt in the rays of the big searchlights. Forsythe, the end, who had his knee twisted in the game with Wesleyan, was on the field for the first time since his accident, and it is possible that he will be taken to Syracuse tomorrow.

If Forsythe should be able to play, Dawson's worries over the left wing would be over. As it is, he is debating as to who will be called on to fill the position. Grace played there on Saturday against New York University, but it would not be surprising if he called on Daly, an erstwhile back, who also had a chance at one of the ends in Saturday's game.

Every man on the squad who had a chance to play against N. Y. U. came through the battle in tip-top condition. There were no injuries, and the usual Monday quota of bruises was missing. Collins, who wrenched his knee a bit, was as fit as ever, and Stevens, who did not play against the Violet because of a boil on his neck, was also on the field in uniform.

The Columbia squad will leave New York tomorrow morning on the Empire State Express. In addition to the twenty or twenty-five players, the party will include Lawering Tyson, graduate manager of athletics, and Charles Halstead Mapes, Chairman of the University Committee on Athletics. It is Dawson's plan to rush the players from the train to the playing field and have them go through a drill. It is barely possible that they will get into their uniforms and go through a light drill on Thursday morning. Following the game the squad is to be the guest of the Syracuse alumni of Columbia at a dinner in the Hotel Onondaga.

To Play Return Game at Soccer.

Soccer teams representing Columbia University and City College will clash in the City College Stadium Friday afternoon. This contest will be a return game. Last Friday the City College eleven defeated the Blue and White by a count of 1 to 0.

MINTO II. CAPTURES HANDICAP AT BOWIE

Fellowes Entry, Carrying Light Weight, Outraces Deckmate in Red Cross Event.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 25.—Cornelius Fellowes's Minto II. captured the Red Cross Autumn Consolation Handicap at a mile, which was the feature of today's card. The free running son of Sundridge, which was in with the light weight of 101 pounds, was taken to the front early by McAtee and had little trouble in staving off the challenge of Deckmate in the stretch.

Two winning long shots enlivened the afternoon, Johnny McTaggart getting C. A. Comiskey home in the third at odds of 20 to 1, while Rodriquez scored in the fifth with Ballast, which paid $45.30 for a $2 investment. Besides winning with Minto II., McAtee also piloted Poor Butterfly to victory in the sixth race at a mile and a quarter.

The summaries:

CONCANNON OFF IN FRONT.

Defeats Greenleaf in Opening Game by 100 to 21 Score.

Ralph Greenleaf, the young pocket billiards expert of Monmouth, Ill., got off to a poor start yesterday in the opening two blocks of his 1,200 points match with Joseph Concannon at Daly's Academy. Concannon, playing in exceptional form, took the afternoon match by a score of 100 to 21 in four innings, making a high run of 41 against Greenleaf's 14.

Andrew Jackson and his Historic Shave

GEORGE THE FOURTH of England once sent Andrew Jackson a message by a titled lady who arrived when our Iron President was wearing several days' growth of beard.

Remonstrated with by James Buchanan, the old Indian fighter speedily shaved and received the fair messenger, who later said: "At none of the courts of Europe have I ever seen a man who in elegance of manner could excel General Jackson"—an unconscious compliment to both the General's skill and his razor. Yet this great President, whose guiding principle was "Desperate courage makes one a majority"—used the same simple razor that your own father used—a model whose general form 20 centuries have not bettered except with the safety, the extra convenience of the guarded

"One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name!"

In the new melodrama in which Jane Cowl opened last night at the Selwyn, crowding further reduces the glorious life to a space of five minutes. But the scene is an effective one in its rather hectic, vociferous manner; and, as carried by Miss Cowl, is not unlikely to land the play a success.

Peggy Lawrence is a Broadway chorus girl who, when we first meet her, is quite callously disputing her claim to her latest lover with the man's wife. Things are so ordered that, at the end of the frist act, he feels the call to service, and leaves both women to join the American engineers in France. Peggy follows him, but not to serve. She obtains a post as telephone operator in the hope of being near Billy Laidlaw. They meet, but in that moment his call comes and he volunteers for dangerous service at the front. And still Peggy is thinking only of herself and her lover, callous to all the great issues of the war.

It is the moment of the great German push of last Summer, and Peggy is confronted with a rather trying dilemma. She has time to telephone Billy of his danger and so save his life. But if she does so it will be too late to get word through to an entire division. It is the man she loves against twelve thousand. Her first decision is personal and selfish. But the instincts of service and heroism, which hitherto she has so doggedly resisted, gain the upper and she makes the patriotic choice.

In the moment in which her menage gets through a boche shell arrives, shattering the cottage in which she is stationed and wounding her. Outwardly the scene is the old stuff of melodrama; but its inner impulse is new and rather creditably human.

In the final act there is a still further regeneration. Billy's wife is also in France, and the two meet in the hour in which news comes that he is dead. Once more the duel of words is waged between them, and this time it is the wife who wins. Peggy, lifted on the wings of her crowded five minutes, rises to a comprehension of the deeper values in conduct and renounces her lover, who, as presently appears, was not as dead as he might have been.

Here also there is a fine idea, but the medium through which it is developed is not action but words, and the lines of the play seem rather inadequate. Or perhaps the trouble is that so deep a regeneration, to be made credible, requires a more thorough preparation than Messrs. Selwyn and Pollock have given it. The transition from callous Peggy to Peggy the saint seems very abrupt. At the worst, however, the incident brings a highly moral and pleasant ending.

The play is constructed with a feeling for melodramatic effect which, on the whole, is sound. The scene in a metropolitan dance club, in which the two women first meet, brings into striking contrast the life voluptuary with the call of patriotic service. And, though their wrangle is absurd enough and, in fact, humanly quite impossible, it will probably prove effective popularly.

The scenes in France are quite tellingly staged. The French parts are played by French actors, and very well played, especially the old woman of Michelette Burani and the young officer of Georges Flateau. There is so much French spoken, and it is emotionally so effective, that Miss Cowl is obliged to act at times as interpreter—for the other Americans on the stage. But the audience also is grateful.

The comedy of the play is entrusted to Franklyn Ardell, who takes the part of a Broadway actor in the service of the Y. M. C. A. His lines are bright and he scores throughout, especially in a scene of frank terror at the boche bombs, which turns very credibly to a final moment of heroism. Orme Caldara as the polygamous hero, Christine Norman as his very noble wife, and Henry Stephenson as their high-minded friend, play with their accustomed skill and finish.

Miss Cowl has had better parts and has played them better; but her telephone scene is, in its way, as thrilling as any moment in the crop of plays which we owe to the war.

'GOOD LUCK, SAM,' IS MERRY

Musical Comedy of Soldier Life Aided by Geraldine Farrar.

"Good Luck, Sam!" a musical comedy version of soldier life, was presented last night at the Lexington Theatre by the boys of Camp Merritt to a large and generously applauding audience. Produced under the direction of Frank Lea Short, "big-brothered" by George M. Cohan, and with settings and costumes designed by Robert Edmund Jones, the production had much of the dash that characterizes a successful Broadway musical comedy.

The well powdered and daintily dressed soldier chorus showed little trace of masculinity until Geraldine Farrar walked out on the stage in the second act to sing "Mighty Lak' a Rose." The boys who took the female roles, principals and chorus, showed surprisingly little angularity in their movements and sung well.

The play deals with the misfortunes of Private Sam Esterbrook, who is arrested and tried for violating military discipline by stealing the best girl of Second Lieutenant Fred Andrews. The first act shows the heroine's habitat, Mrs. Marshmallow's college for girls, where the offense is committed. The second act shows Private Esterbrook confined in the sort of a guard house the soldier would enjoy. This act is made up of vaudeville, and it was during this act that Miss Farrar sang. The final act is the trial scene, in which the defendant is acquitted. Much of the music, which is by Sergeant Louis G. Merrill, is tuneful.

Sergeant Edward R. Christman, who plays the part of the strong man in the vaudeville show, was slightly injured last night. The iron pipe, which he allows to be bent over the muscles of his arm, glanced upward, gashing his right cheek.

Robert B. Mantell Acts Othello.

Robert B. Mantell's first appearance in "Othello" in the course of his present engagement took place at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre last night. Mr. Mantell will play a total of six Shakespearean roles during the week. "Othello" will be repeated on Thursday night.

'BY PIGEON POST' ARRIVES.

Old, Faithful Carrier Is Glorified in Imported War Melodrama.

BY PIGEON POST, a melodrama in three acts, by Austin Page. At the George M. Cohan Theatre.

Blondel.....St. Clair Bayfield
Lacken.....Harrison Hunter
Captain Paul Chalfont.....Jerome Patrick
Mme. Chalfont.....Ida Waterman
Major Pierre Vaudry.....Vincent Serrano
Marie Latour.....Phoebe Foster
Colonel Laroque.....John Sainpolis
Margot Latour.....Peggy O'Neil
General Delapierre.....Frank Kemble Cooper
Orderly.....John A. Higgins
Orderly.....Hugo Schmedes

And still they come. The armistice has been signed and, presumably, peace is to follow in the course of human—and diplomatic—events, but the war melodramas keep coming. The latest, which came to the George M. Cohan Theatre last night, is "By Pigeon Post," in which the old faithful carrier pigeon is restored to his day of glory in this time of wireless telegraphy and airplanes. The pigeons are a real part of the play. They are aided in the service of France by a resourceful Captain, an unusually attractive Red Cross nurse, an equally usually attractive feminine chauffeur, a General and a Colonel, who, in the last act, overcome the tricks of a German spy and the treachery of a renegade French Major. The German spy "is one of the strongest characters in the play. He is a human being. The only thing against him, in the end, is that he is a German. His is such a rôle as one would expect to see in a play written fifty years after the war. It is excellently filled by Harrison Hunter.

Jerome Patrick acquits himself well as the French Captain, and Phoebe Foster, as the Red Cross nurse, gives him every excuse for loving her, as well as France. If every General could have a chauffeur like Peggy O'Neil, the competition for promotion would be keener. The others in the cast, with one or two sad exceptions, do not attract unfavorable attention to themselves—and this is not as left-handed a compliment as it sounds. But the play, for all of the situations it develops, remains always a most melodramatic melodrama, and, coming where it does in the procession of its kind, one feels like exclaiming when he sees it, "Oh, I know you. I've seen you before."

MERLE ALCOCK PLEASES.

Contralto at Her Best in Old Welsh, Irish, and English Songs.

Whenever we see Kurt Schindler at the pianoforte we feel assured that something interesting is bound to follow, for he is usually associated with laudable musical affairs. And yesterday afternoon did not prove an exception to this, by no means, hard and fast rule. Mr. Schindler accompanied in his distinguished manner Merle Alcock, who sang, also in a distinguished manner, numbers by Haydn, Handel—which is still spelled in the German way on programs, though the grand old man of English music Anglicized his name—Lulli, Rossi, a French group beginning with the inevitable Dubussy, and some old Welsh, Irish, and English songs, ending with Sidney Homer's pleasing lyrics. Miss Alcock was at her best in the latter part of the program, although words of praise are due her legato singing in "Ah, Rendimi," and her diction in "Cecilia," a French-Canadian folksong arranged by Emile Vuillermos. She was wholly charming in these. Her enunciation in the other French numbers was better than her pronunciation. In English both were almost perfect.

Her personality is what the hygienists would call eupeptic, attractively wholesome, and she is good-looking into the bargain. Her voice is rich in quality, particularly in the "Chalameau" register—we borrow the expression from the clarinetist; yes, as warm and as lovely as the lower range of a B-flat clarinet. She is also human—and, tell it not in Gath!—she is a womanly singer, nowadays almost as obsolete as Bernard Shaw's bugbear, the "womanly woman." Merle Alcock can melt the heart in your bosom, no matter how flinty life has made it, by singing with unaffected pathos such an old Welsh song as "The Bluing of the Day," or the "Irish Peasant Song," with its naïve, touching refrain, "The wild tears fall." Our native American racial roots are in these old Celtic, Gaelic, English music, and nature, or atavism, gives you a jolt to the centre of your being when such an artist as Merle Alcock interprets them. For an encore at the close she gave with much spirit "When the Boys Come Home." Her audience was evidently delighted. She is worth hearing again.

SAW GREEK PRIEST BURNED.

English Officer Tells How Bulgarians Mistreated Prisoners.

A special cable message dated Nov. 20 from Athens to The Liberal, an American-Hellenic newspaper, published weekly, says:

"'The General Secretary of the Department of Justice has returned from Seres and communicates the following:

"'In September, 1917, the inhabitants of Seres were 23,693, of which 14,938 were Greeks, 7,923 Turks, and 730 Israelites. In September, 1918, after the Bulgarian occupation, the inhabitants were 5,793, of which half were Bulgarians transported from the interior of Bulgaria; there were only 2,293 Greeks, the half of which were under ten years of age. In Drama there were found twelve bodies of Greeks thrown in wells by the Bulgarians.

"'A commission of the Red Cross, upon request of Mr. Venizelos, visited Eastern Macedonia and witnessed the destruction of towns and villages as well as other horrible crimes. English prisoners arriving from Bulgaria in Saloniki relate the martyrdoms suffered during their captivity. An English officer tells how he saw a Greek priest hanged by the feet and roasted in a small fire. The representative of the American Tobacco Fund communicates that the Bulgarians, fleeing from Cavalla, carried with them 10,000 cattle.

"'The Archbishop of London, who arrived in Athens after a visit to Macedonia, communicates that the American Legation in Sofia is transformed into a hospital. The Bulgarians maltreated the Greek and Serbian prisoners. He was told much of the Bulgarian atrocities and the destruction of the property of the Greek population, and was a witness himself of inhuman acts. Sub-Lieutenant Manthrakis, a prisoner of war, relates that he was interned, together with English and French officers, in a cage, naked and without food. The Bulgarians stole from the English officer his gold artificial teeth.'"

Edna Blanche Robinson Returns.

Edna Blanche Robinson return at Aeolian Hall last evening to the concert platform after five years' absence, longer in her case than it would be for most singers, for she had been constantly in public from her début as a five-year-old child prodigy, Edna Showalter. She has now a voice of unusual quality—clear, cool, silver—which she uses in defiance of some conventions of recitals today. Indeed, her "vocal-piano" recital was most remarkable in that she played her own accompaniment to twenty songs, a musician to the finger tips, though her very first air was the mad scene from "Lucia," that ordinarily enlists a regiment, from a full orchestra to a pianist and solo flute. Mrs. Robinson's voice was at its best in several of Grieg's lyrics, where a cool, crisp tone conjured Northern Lights and latitudes. At the end there was another coloratura air, that of Titania from "Mignon," and after it "The Star-Spangled Banner," for the singer makes much of the fact that she was "American trained."

'LITTLE BROTHER' A PROBLEM DRAMA

Marriage of Persons of Different Faiths the Theme of Play at the Belmont.

WHITESIDE ACTS SUPERBLY

As the Rabbi He Gives His Best Creation in Years—Tyrone Power an Imposing Figure as the Priest.

THE LITTLE BROTHER.—A Drama in Three Acts.—By Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James, based upon Mr. Goldsmith's novel, "Rabbi and Priest." At the Belmont.

Rabbi Elkan.....Walter Whiteside
Father Petrovitch.....Tyrone Power
George Lubin.....Richard Dix
Shinovitch.....Sam Sidman

In "The Little Brother," which had its first performance in this city last night at the Belmont Theatre, there is so much which is fine and so much which is dramatically moving that it is to be particularly regretted that the play has been marred by the insistence of the authors upon bending it to what they have obviously considered the exigencies of the theatre. But there is in the play much more of good than of bad; its conflict, if not new, is one of ideas, and there is at least an attempt to shed a new light upon an old and vexing problem. For these reasons, and because of a remarkably fine performance by Walker Whiteside, it seems destined to be a much-talked-of play.

Intermarriage of persons of opposing faiths is the theme of "The Little Brother," with the central figures a Jewish rabbi and a Russian Catholic priest. The first act, which is unfortunately the best, develops this theme rapidly, and culminates in the announcement of the marriage of the rabbi's daughter and the priest's ward. Each is renounced by the respective elder, and the situation upon which the curtain fails is one from which the characters cannot be extricated save by the grace of the playwright.

The two remaining acts advance matters more slowly, and the audience is permitted to anticipate the denouement. For the Catholic father and the Jewish rabbi are brothers—separated forty years earlier, when their parents had died in a Russian pogrom, and by a strange turn of circumstance raised in opposite faiths. This, to be sure, is merely a theatrical contrivance, and in no sense an answer to the authors' problem. Something more nearly resembling an answer—albeit far from convincing—is put forth by Mr. Whiteside at the final curtain, when the great war is cited as the force which is wiping out racial and religious barriers. But to even this creed, of course, there may be found dissenters.

The play is deficient structurally in that its dramatic peak occurs at the end of the first act, and that the pace of the piece slackens visibly from then onward. Another defect, so far as the present production is concerned, is that Mr. Whiteside is kept off the stage for something like an hour in the middle of the play. The authors have not been strictly honest in drawing their opposing characters; their Catholic priest is narrow and bigoted, and the audience is made to feel throughout that the right is on the side of the Jew. Last night's audience felt it particularly because of the fine quality of Mr. Whiteside's performance—so much so that his reappearance in the third act was greeted with a burst of applause.

Mr. Whiteside's rabbi is a dignified, pathetic, and subtle characterization—rising on many occasions to Warfieldian heights, and by long odds his best creation in many years. Tyrone Power, as the Catholic father, is given fewer opportunities in a far less gracious rôle, but he is an imposing figure in priestly robes, and uses his splendid voice to good effect. Of the minor characters, the best is Mabel Bunyea, as the rabbi's daughter. The lesser figures have been overstressed by the author to the detriment of the play. Sam Sidman, however, is an amusing marriage broker, although much of his material has the ring of matter which accrued to the rôle during the rehearsal period.

The play was produced last season in London, where Lyn Harding made the priest's rôle the star part. The locale is New York, and the author, Milton Goldsmith, an American.

"PINAFORE" IN 18 MINUTES.

De Wolf Hopper Sings Sir Joseph Porter at the Hippodrome.

The essentials of "Pinafore," compressed with some suasion into eighteen minutes, were played for the first time at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon as an added feature of "Everything." The inspiration of the undertaking was undoubtedly the presence in the Hippodrome company of De Wolf Hopper, who on this occasion quits his well-known Dick Deadeye for the more imposing figure of Sir Joseph Porter. His Admiral is unctuous and humorous, even in eighteen minutes, but his voice was not at its best at the matinée.

Naturally, only the highest of high spots can be touched in the time allotted—thus Little Buttercup's entrance song is given some ten seconds and the mystic lady number is gone entirely. But parts of nearly all the remaining numbers are sung, and for the most part sung well. Belle Story is an entrancing figure as the Captain's daughter, and sings her one number well.

Several other changes have been made in the Hippodrome show since its first performance. The most notable addition is the Hannefords, an equestrian troupe who perform marvelous stunts on and off galloping horses. To make room for this act and "Pinafore" the skating ballet has been somewhat shortened, and the mysterious Houdini is no longer of the company.

PEACE COMMISSION SPECULATION

Washington is so far Athenian and Gallic that everybody there delights to hear or see some new thing. Political surmise and speculation abound. Rumors and theories are propagated or die out. Political news is usually interesting and sometimes true. Washington has long ceased to be much of a place for gambling. The more refined amusement of making policies and appointments before the President has announced them never fails.

Thus Washington correspondence shows us "well-informed quarters," in other words the brotherhood of amiable guessers, disposed to believe that Mr. ROOT, Mr. TAFT, and Mr. HUGHES are no longer on the eligible list for membership in the American Peace Commission. If none of these is to be appointed, why, Governor McCALL of Massachusetts becomes the favorite among the political bookmakers. Surely, these innocent dabblers in assumption are more than a little unjust to Mr. WILSON. Mr. McCALL was once a distinguished statesman of the conservative Republican type. He is now a distinguished statesman of a rather ambiguous and opportunist new Republicanism. It is not known that his study of international affairs has been as eager as his devotion to social justice and uplift. No doubt, he would be a dignified and an imposing figure anywhere and in any capacity; but if Mr. WILSON were to appoint as a representative of the Republican Party on the Peace Commission a Republican whose friends and allies have just succeeded in defeating a Republican Senator in Congress from Massachusetts, a Senator to whose shoes, as to those of Mr. LODGE, Governor McCALL has long ardently aspired, how could such an appointment be regarded otherwise than as an act of political finesse, or malice, unless, indeed, Governor McCALL'S repeated eulogiums of Mr. WILSON should seem to make it a personal reward?

The name of Mr. McCALL is used without prejudice, merely as an example. It is right to believe, until convincing testimony to the contrary is on record, that Mr. WILSON will seek to select the best qualified and the ablest men as members of the Peace Commission. To do otherwise, whether he is to appear as a principal in Europe or not, would be to disappoint the United States, to lower its prestige and its pride. It would also confirm in many minds the belief or prejudice that Mr. WILSON habitually prefers mediocrity.

The point is that conjecture in Washington ascribes a narrow and personal view to the President. It is said at the capital that the President "does not like Mr. LODGE." Therefore it is impossible that Mr. LODGE should be a Peace Commissioner. Mr. LODGE differs with Mr. WILSON as to various details of the peace settlement that ought to be made. These differences on matters of policy may prevent the appointment of Mr. LODGE, ample as are his knowledge and experience of international affairs. Surely it is unjust to believe that the bestowal of great place is determined not by judgment, but by mere likes and dislikes.

HOW TO CLEAR THE CABLES.

So much matter of various degrees of urgency is now being piled on the Atlantic cables that we have almost gone back to the condition of civil war times, when the cable was not working at all, and "three days later from Europe" was a common headline after the arrival of a mail steamer. A considerable part of this congestion is due to the casualty lists; each name uses approximately ten words, so that a day's list of three thousand names means thirty thousand words more put on the cables.

The fact that the total number of casualties has been cabled indicates that General PERSHING has all the names. His headquarters will continue to cable them, it appears, at the rate of three or four thousand a day until all are sent—which will be something like seven weeks, at the rate now indicated. Navigation is once more safe and speedy on the Atlantic; a courier from American headquarters in France could reach Washington in ten days. Why not set aside for transmission by cable enough casualties for ten days' publication, since they are being sent in small batches anyway, and then send a courier across with all the rest of them? The families could be notified by telegraph from Washington as soon as the courier arrives; newspaper publication could proceed at the rate at which it would proceed if they were all cabled; and in the meantime the cables would be freed of thirty thousand words or more of the daily load. Under this plan four-fifths of the families interested would receive the news earlier by periods varying from one day to four weeks, and the remaining fifth would experience no delay at all. The cables could then be used for the highly important public and private messages which must now be delayed.

WITH THE PRESIDENT AWAY.

The announcement that the President would absent himself from the country for an indefinite time for the purpose of attending the Peace Conference at Paris gave rise at first to general astonishment, then to the spirit of inquiry, and lastly to almost universal disapproval. It was said, and denial was impossible, that no positive law forbids the President of the United States to leave the country. No positive law was necessary, for it was the general assumption that at least during a session of Congress he would necessarily be at his post. Custom and prescription, each in its own sphere, have the force of law, and everybody saw at once that prescription, running in this case beyond legal memory, since it dates from the organization of the Government, would be violated by the execution of the President's design.

The people of the country have hitherto thought very little about the matter; it had never occurred to them that they would be called upon to think about it. For that reason, and as an aid to forming correct judgment, we invite the attention of readers of THE TIMES to a review of constitutional and legal principles bearing upon the decision of the President which we publish elsewhere upon this page today. We think the clear reasoning of the writer of the article will lead to the conviction that the President should not be away from Washington while Congress is in session. We have pointed out that the executive power of the Government is vested in him. He is also a part of the law-making power. Every bill passed by Congress must be submitted for his consideration. It can become a law only after he has affixed his signature; after he has permitted ten days to elapse without returning the bill to Congress; or after it has been passed over his veto. Thus, as the writer of the article to which we refer points out, the Constitution designates "one "Executive officer of the Government, whose personal co-operation "is absolutely necessary to make the "bill which Congress enacts the law "of the land. Such designated, indispensable person is the President, for "Congress possesses no final law-"making power unless the President "does the final act."

There is an evident presupposition that the President will be at the national capital during sessions of Congress, at all times ready to perform his constitutional duty. The public welfare requires that laws should be enacted. Congress cannot enact them without the President. Away from Washington during a session of Congress, the President is away from his post of duty.

PHILADELPHIA VS. NEW YORK.

The alleged freight congestion at the Port of New York is nowhere viewed with such alarm as at those other ports which would like to reduce the congestion by taking over some of the business. Naturally they approve the arbitrary diversion of trade in their direction, and would like to help it along by supporting whatever would promote it. Thus The Philadelphia Public Ledger thinks that the lighterage cost of distributing freight throughout the Port of New York ought to be added to the freight rate as an addition to the line haul, and would like to reduce the line haul to Philadelphia because Philadelphia is nearer to the West. To Philadelphia it seems that "in any "just schedule of freight rates the "physical conditions at the Port of "New York, involving expensive operations which are totally unnecessary "at the Port of Philadelphia, can no "longer be made a charge upon the "whole country as at present."

That is a natural view for Philadelphia to take. It is not the view of those who prefer to bring their trade to New York, although inducements are offered to take it elsewhere. After Philadelphia has spent the quarter of a billion which New York City and State have spent for the accommodation of national trade it may perhaps have a larger share of it. Yet that is not altogether sure, for, by common consent, the natural advantages of New York are the best on the continent.

It is true that Philadelphia is nearer the West, but New York is nearer export destinations. If Philadelphia has railway facilities in some respects as good as New York's, New York has steamship facilities better than Philadelphia's. It would not advantage Philadelphia to lop off lighterage costs in order to increase the cost of doing business at New York, because that would not give Philadelphia the foreign trade connections which bring trade. The rate to New York properly includes lighterage because delivery in New Jersey, at Hoboken or Weehawken, is not delivery in Manhattan, or Brooklyn, or Queens any more than delivery in Philadelphia is delivery at Camden; or at the shipyards along the river. It may be doubted whether delivery by lighter to destination, either on land or alongside steamships for export, is not cheaper than by land. There are those who think that the trackless rivers are better and cheaper for intricate deliveries than any terminals which can be provided on land.

Philadelphia has a right to its views on this point, but it has not a right to wrong views on the question of congestion. The congestion is less than Philadelphia would like to have it thought, and so far as it existed or exists could not be reduced by the method of diversion elsewhere. It is known in Philadelphia that when there was railway congestion here it was due to lack of steamships in the world for reasons of war, and to confusion of Government priority orders which put tonnage on wheels when there were not bottoms enough in existence to take it away as fast as railways could deliver it. Not until there shall be like conditions can there be like congestion again. It follows that there should be no disturbance of permanent relations of the ports for any such exceptional and temporary reasons. Less generally known, but equally worth knowing, is the fact that there would have been no congestion here if this port had been supplied with the tonnage available before the war. In 1914 clearances were for 15,421,394 tons of shipping. In every year since there has been a decrease to 11,389,949 tons in the fiscal year 1917-18. The facilities of New York, which before the war were equal to the accommodation of tonnage larger than war tonnage by either ships or railways, were not decreased by the war. Lighterage and priorities did not affect tonnage actually carried. The doubling of the values in foreign trade is a matter of prices and has nothing to do with quantities or freight rates.

The Director General is now advertising inducements to travel and ship through other Atlantic ports. That would not be necessary if there were an excess of traffic pressing to be done through them. No objection need be taken to the co-operation between his railways and coastwise steamships, not even if Government has hitherto prosecuted such conspiracies and combinations and Congress has legislated against them. The steamships run both ways, and traffic is likely to be attracted to New York as well as from it. The advantages of New York do not need to be advertised. But not even New York is strong enough to be indifferent to diversion of trade by edict, and wrong notions, and facts which are not facts.

INDEPENDENT BELGIUM.

Re-entering his capital after an absence of more than four years, ALBERT, King of the Belgians, shows his understanding of the political results of the war in which his country and he have taken so noble a part. In his speech to Parliament he said that the Government proposed "to make the "consultation of the nation a reality "on the basis of equal suffrage for all "men of the mature age required for "the exercise of civil rights." At present the minimum age of an elector for members of the Senate is 30, and a part of the Senate is chosen indirectly by the Provincial Councils. All members of the Chamber of Representatives are elected directly by the vote of citizens over 25. The principle of proportional representation of parties prevails. In elections for the Chamber citizens with certain financial qualifications have a supplementary vote; and two supplementary votes are given to persons of 25 who have received certain educational diplomas, held certain offices, or belong to professions in the case of which a superior education may be presumed. No person has more than three votes. The King's words promise an equal suffrage with no other qualification than that of age.

Henceforth, too, Belgium is to be an independent and sovereign State. She is "victorious and freed from the neu-"trality that was imposed upon her "by States which have been shattered "to their foundations by war." She was united against her will to Holland by the Congress of Vienna in 1815.

Belgians, sharing the spirit of the revolution of 1830 in France, rose against the Dutch. In vain the King of Holland offered to give them a Government of their own with only a personal union under the crown with Holland. They declared their independence and their desire for a hereditary monarchy with free institutions. They would have no more of the House of Orange. In London a conference of the Powers pondered this assault on the sacred labors of Vienna. It had to recognize the independence of Belgium. In 1831 the conference settled the conditions of the divorce. Belgium was neutralized. The Concert of the Powers guaranteed the neutrality: "Belgium shall "form an independent and perpetual-"ly neutral State. It shall be bound "to observe such neutrality toward "all other States." This declaration was repeated word for word in the treaty of April 19, 1839, between Belgium and the Netherlands. On the same day in London the Powers, "his "Majesty the Emperor of Austria, "King of Hungary and Bohemia, his "Majesty the King of the French, "her Majesty the Queen of the "United Kingdom of Great Britain "and Ireland, his Majesty the King "of Prussia, and his Majesty the Em-"peror of all the Russias," recognized and guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium.

The Franco-Prussian war put Belgium in a perilous situation. The army was increased. Considerable forces were sent to the frontier. In England there was much alarm. NAPOLEON III. had put himself in BISMARCK'S hands by secretly proposing the annexation of Belgium to France. The British Government made known its resolve to defend the integrity of Belgium according to the treaty of 1839. It induced France and Prussia to agree to respect Belgian neutrality. How Germany carried out her long-prepared plan in 1914 the world knows too well. The sickening sophistication about Notrecht, and so on, need not be recalled here. His Majesty the Emperor of Austria, his Majesty the King of Prussia, his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, are become as shadowy and ghostlike as NAPOLEON III. Great Britain and France and their allies, none more gallantly than Belgium, have shattered the empires of fraud and force. Notrecht is dead. Weltmacht was still-born. After her long struggle and sacrifice Belgium is entitled to proclaim herself a sovereign State. Her own courage, the respect, the affection of the free world, are her inalienable guarantees.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Americans Win Two Reputations.

Often enough to be effective, but not often enough, fortunately, to get on the nerves of the American soldiers in France, they have been reminded that they were there in a representative as well as a military capacity, and that by their behavior toward their foreign friends, no less than toward their foreign enemies, the people of the United States would be judged. It is a cause of sincerest rejoicing that by unanimous report the members of our Expeditionary Forces, in all ranks, from the commanding General to the privates, have shown a kindliness and courtesy toward the civilian populations among whom they have lived that gave them a reputation in its way not less valuable either to themselves or to those of us who remained at home than the other reputation they earned as fighting men unafraid of comparison with the best in any army.

Even the Germans admit their mastery of the arts of war—as the Germans naturally would, having been beaten by them in several of the war's hardest battles. But these soldiers have done more than fight. In great numbers there are formulating stories about the American heroes like the one told by Mr. JAMES [illegible] a dispatch printed on Sunday.

An American Colonel, having noticed by the roadside a French repatriate who had been supplied from some source with white bread, alighted from his car and soon discovered that many others like him were also in possession of the same sort of food. When the Frenchman was asked whence the bread came, he pointed at an American military policeman standing near, and the latter, when questioned in turn, admitted that he had eaten nothing all day. "I couldn't," he said, "when I saw these poor starving men coming down the road." Evidently many other American soldiers had felt the same creditable inability.

That episode, we have a right to believe, was typical. Of course, the Americans are not alone in doing these kindly things, but—well, they are keeping high the credit of their country not less as men than as soldiers, and the peasants are as well content with their presence as was the young Duchess of Luxemburg after she had met General PERSHING and certain apprehensions—doubtless of German origin—with regard to the new "invaders" had been dissipated by that most gallant officer and gentleman.

Surrender Was Not Unavoidable.

When one remembers the confident hopes with which the German naval officers had watched through the years the steady increase in the number of their warships, it becomes more and more difficult to understand how it was possible for them to take those vessels across to the English coast and deliver them over into the hands of their most hated enemies. In like circumstances—with an armistice signed and the faith of their Government pledged, that is—presumably the officers of other navies would have performed the same dreadful task. What cannot be imagined, however, of navies with such traditions as those, say, of Great Britain or the United States, is that for them like circumstances could arise or such an intolerable humiliation be demanded from them.

It could have been avoided by the Germans, for their refusal to take the sea in a last desperate adventure was the beginning of the end for Germany and showed her rulers that further resistance was hopeless, the acceptance of peace on any terms the one escape from utter ruin.

The German sailors may have been—probably were—right in thinking that a battle on the sea would mean the death of most of them, but to have gone down with flags flying would have been the substitution of glory for the shame that is now theirs, and it is impossible to escape the belief that only men who had obeyed such orders as they had obeyed—orders to sink passenger and hospital ships, to shell women and children in lifeboats, and to bombard helpless coast villages and Summer resorts—would have refused to obey the command to give battle to a superior foe. The chances against victory would have been many, but risks as bad or worse have been taken again and again before now.

That the personnel of the German Navy survives is something, of course, but what a survival it is! The one real fight in which they engaged, at a moment and in conditions selected by themselves, they lost, and doubtless lost it because they pretended to have won it. They never tried another. They are strangely quick despairers for men who are supposed to be courageous and loyal [illegible]

PRESIDENT WILSON'S PROJECTED TRIP TO EUROPE ARGUED BEFORE THE SUPREME COURT OF PUBLIC OPINION.

Review of Constitutional Requirements and Precedents Leads to the Conclusion That the Call of Duty to the President When Congress Is in Session Is to Be at the Seat of Government.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK TIMES.
BY AN EMINENT JURIST.

The Supreme Court of Public Opinion has before it the question of the President of the United States absenting himself from the seat of Government for an indefinite period, and taking with him the Secretary of State. The Constitution enacts that "the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America; that he shall take care that the laws be fully executed," and when he takes the oath prescribed by the Constitution to "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States," the President becomes the executive head of the nation. As its executive head, the nation furnishes him with an official residence at the seat of Government, which residence, while called in affectionate speech of the people the "White House," is in law styled "the Executive Mansion."

Since the foundations of the fathers, save in the one instance when hostile armies compelled a temporary withdrawal, the executive, judicial and legislative branches of the Government, have, at that seat of Government, performed their duties as officers of the United States. Such being the case, we take it that, when the President of the United States shall for an indefinite period absent himself from the seat of Government of the United States, the burden of justifying such action, both in propriety and legality, rests upon him who advances the proposition.

That an unbroken performance of duty at a certain place should mold itself into an unwritten law of Government is apparent to all men, for, as the Supreme Court of the United States (Stuart vs. Laird) said, when no law could be cited showing the authority of one of its members to sit at circuit outside of Washington, that a practice so to do "commencing with the organization of the judicial system affords an irresistible argument, and has indeed fixed the construction. It is a contemporary interpretation of the most formidable nature. This practical exposition is too strong and obstinate to be shaken or controlled. Of course, the question is at rest and ought not to be disturbed."

Such being the case, we take it, when a President proposes to change a practice buttressed by a century's governmental observance, and absent himself from the seat of Government for an indefinite period, even though the President be a law unto himself, and will, of course, decide the question for himself, that in the court of public opinion—which in America is final arbiter—the burden of justifying such absenteeism, both in propriety and law, rests on him. As we have said, the question of the propriety of him absenting himself from the seat of Government at any time, and especially at the present crisis in its affairs at home, is one he may decide for himself. But the second question, the legality of his absenteeism, is one which he cannot determine, but which is determined by the Constitution, the laws of the land, and the decisions bearing thereon.

In taking up this legal question, we start right by stating right the real issue. And that question is, "Can a President of the United States, when Congress is in session, legally absent himself from the seat of Government for an indefinite period?" Now, it will be observed that this question concerns two things, and two things only: First, absence when Congress is in session, and, secondly, absence from the seat of Government. Where the absence is spent, what the absentee President is doing, whether he is outside the United States or in it, are matters apart from the question. It concerns absence anywhere; absence for any purpose; absence from the seat of Government when Congress is in session. Can such Presidential absence be justified under the Constitution, the acts of Congress, and the decisions of the courts?

To that legal question let us turn. We have, first, the fact—and we are here dealing, as President Cleveland said, with a condition and not a theory—the fact of the sitting of Congress at the seat of Government at the coming December session. Congress will meet on Dec. 2, because the Constitution commands it: "The Congress shall assemble at least once every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday of December, unless they shall by law appoint a different," which in this case they have not done. So far as Congress goes, it requires no present citation of statute to show that the only place where this Congress can legally enact laws is at the seat of Government. And it will be noted that so much is the nation concerned with the place where its laws are enacted that the Constitution commands that "neither house during the session of Congress shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn * * * to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting."

We take it, then, that on Dec. 2 and following, for the indefinite period during the Presidential absence, Congress, under the Constitution and laws, will be in session at the seat of Government to fulfill the duties intrusted to it by the Constitution, viz.: "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States which shall consist of Senate and House of Representatives." And we take it, further, that during that constitutional, commanded session Congress at the seat of Government is at its post of duty to enable the President, either by message or personal presence, to fulfill the duty imposed on him by the Constitution, that "He shall from time to time give to Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

But in vesting Congress with all legislative power, the Constitution has gone outside the legislative branch of the Government, and designated one executive officer of the Government whose personal co-operation is absolutely necessary to make the bill, which Congress enacts, the law of the land. Such designated, indispensable, constitutional person is the President, for Congress possesses no final lawmaking power unless the President does the final act. We also find one other executive officer designated, not by the Constitution but by statute, who, after the President has performed his constitutional duty and by his personal approval and signature made into a law the bill which Congress has passed, is to receive that law from the President, file the same in his office at the seat of Government, and become its custodian. This second designated executive officer is the Secretary of State of the United States. The several constitutional and statutory steps necessary to the passage of a law are, first, passage of the proposed bill by both houses, and attesting the same by the signatures of their presiding officers, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House. Second, presentation of such bill by this Congress to the President. Third, the alternative personal duty of the President (a) if he approves the bill, the Constitution directs him to sign it, and the courts hold that the moment he signs the presented bill it then becomes and is the law of the land; (b) if the President does not approve the bill, the Constitution makes it his duty to return it with his objections to the House from which it originated; (c) in case the President does not return the bill within ten days after presentation, the bill becomes a law in the same manner as though he had signed it. Fourth, after the bill has become a law, the statutes of the United States make it the duty of the Secretary of State to "forthwith" file the law and "as soon as possible" to give publicity to it. The several statutes, laws, and judicial decisions enacting and adjudging such steps, are:

First: The duty of Congress assembled at the seat of government on the first Monday of December, 1918, to present to the President, every bill is made mandatory by the Constitution, Article I., Section 7, Clause 2. "Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and Senate shall, before it become a law, be presented to the President of the United States." The method by which such bill is authenticated by Congress is stated by the Supreme Court of the United States (Field vs. Clark), where Justice Harlan says: "Nor does any clause of that instrument (Constitution) either expressly or by necessary implication prescribe the mode in which the fact of the original passage of a bill by the House of Representatives and the Senate shall be authenticated, or preclude Congress from adopting any mode to that end which its wisdom suggests." Although the Constitution does not expressly require bills that have passed Congress to be attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses, usage, the orderly conduct of legislative proceedings, and the rules under which the two bodies have acted since the organization of the Government require that mode of authentication. The signing by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and by the President of the Senate, in open session, of an enrolled bill, is an official attestation by the two houses of such bill as one that has passed Congress. It is a declaration by the two houses, through their presiding officers, to the President, that a bill, thus attested, has received, in due form, the sanction of the legislative branch of the Government, and that it is delivered to him in obedience to the constitutional requirement that all bills which pass Congress shall be presented to him.

Second: That the physical placing of the President's signature on the paper thus presented him changes the bill of Congress into the law of the land has been the uniform decision of the Federal courts. Justice Story of the Supreme Court of the United States, sitting at circuit, (in re Richardson), said: "Now it seems to me clear, from the language (Constitution, Article I., Section 7, Clause 2,) that in every case of a bill, which is approved by the President, it takes effect as a law only by such approval, and from the time of such approval. It is the act of approval which makes it a law, and until that act is done it not a law."

Third: The time when the President signs the bill, and, indeed, under the decisions, the exact hour of the day when the President signs the bill constituting it a law, is all-important, and this time-verification is the personal duty not of the President but of the Secretary of State. How tremendously important this exact time of signing is many cases in courts prove. It will be apparent that in order to fix that time and thus record when the bill became a law, to provide for the custody of the bill and its publication, that the public may be officially informed, the statutes have imposed such a personal duty on the Secretary of State in connection with three persons, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House, that while Congress is in session the Secretary of State cannot absent himself from the seat of government. The "forthwith" duty thus imposed on the Secretary of State is by statute, R. S, Sec. 204: "Whenever a bill, order, resolution or vote of the Senate and House of Representatives, having been approved by the President, or not having been returned by him with his objections, becomes a law or takes effect, it shall forthwith be received by the Secretary of State from the President; and whenever a bill, order, resolution or vote is returned by the President with his objections, and, on being reconsidered, is agreed to be passed and is approved by two-thirds of both houses of Congress, and thereby becomes a law or takes effect, it shall be received by the Secretary of State from the President of the Senate, or Speaker of the House of Representatives, in whichsoever house it shall last have been so approved, and he shall carefully preserve the originals." And the "as soon as possible" duty of furnishing the law to the Congressional printer, so the public may be officially informed, is imposed on the Secretary of State by R. S. Sec. 210: "The Secretary of State shall furnish to the Congressional printer a correct copy of every act and joint resolution as soon as possible after its approval by the President, or after it has become a law, in accordance with the Constitution, without such approval." That these are personal duties of the Secretary of State is not a matter of argument, but a fact of judicial decision. The Supreme Court (Gardner vs. Collector) has thus stated the duty of the Secretary of State in these words: "The Secretary of State has a personal duty on receiving the bill signed by the President; that is, he must place it on file in the office of the Secretary of State. He alone can make the legally authorised publication of it. * * * As the only object in having an authenticated date is to fix when the statute takes effect, it is reasonable that this should be made 'forthwith' as the statute commands, by the officer who receives it from the President, and who is the future custodian of the statute—who alone can give certified copies of them, and from whose office the legally authorized publisher receives the copy from which it is printed."

These several steps, taken by Congress, by their presiding officers, by the President and by the Secretary, each doing his part in due course and appointed time—Congress with no time limitation; the President restricted to ten days after presentation, and the Secretary of State to a course "forthwith" and "as soon as possible"—are the statutory and constitutional ones the law-making powers have followed since the fathers laid the foundations. And that unbroken course led the Supreme Court to say (Field vs. Clark): "An enrolled act in the custody of the Secretary of State, and having the official attestation of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, of the President of the Senate, and of the President of the United States, carries, on its face, a solemn assurance by the legislative and executive departments of the Government, charged, respectively, with the duty of enacting and executing the laws, that it was passed by Congress."

Nor is this orderly, century-attested procedure a mere formality. Nor does it deal with mere scraps of paper. The engrossed parchment sheet that goes from Congress, which is signed by its officers, which is presented to and signed by the President, which is received by the President, and filed by the Secretary of State in the archives of the Government at the seat of Government, that identical paper, and that alone, is the law of the land. Copies of it are not the law, and such a paper cannot be made under the ten-day limit in view of the makers of the Constitution, unless the Congress, the President, and the Secretary of State shall all three be at their places of duty, at the seat of Government. This Congress being now in session, and with the President absent from his post, is it the duty of Congress to send its messengers to follow the President wherever they may chance to find him, every time a bill is passed, in order to present it to him? Or is it the President's duty as President, and in order to fulfill the duties of his office, to be at the seat of Government to receive the bill, and give Congress a place and an opportunity to present such bill? In any ordinary executive procedure, the statement of this proposition would be its own answer, namely, that the President's signature being necessary to enact the law, and Congress being confined to the seat of Government, the intendment of the law is that the President should be at the seat of Government during the session of the Congress, in order that Congress may present to him there the bill it has passed. In the last few momentous months we have seen bills passed and instantly signed by the President, and instantly made laws, and this was done because the President, Congress and the Secretary of State were each at their constitutional place of duty, ready to do at that place their respective constitutional service. During the long and trying Summer of last year, the President, while Congress was in session, remained at the seat of Government to fulfill his constitutional duty.

Turning then to the burden of proof, the court of public opinion asks what law, what provision of the Constitution, now warrants the President in absenting himself from the seat of Government during a session of Congress ordered by the Constitution. When individual Congressmen or Senators absent themselves Congress, by its Sergeant at Arms, has repeatedly brought the absentees back to the seat of Government, and when this law of absenteeism is enforced by Congress on its absentee members, in order that it may perform its constitutional duties, does not the law which makes the President's the final act in the law-making power, by overpowering implication, suggest that the President, whose action is vital to the making of the law, be present also? It is no answer to say that no laws will be needed during his indefinite absence. It is no justifying ground of absence to say that no law will be passed. It is no warrant to say no emergency will arise, and because of these things the President can absent himself.

These are not the tests. The test is not whether the making of laws will get along as well when the President is absent as when he is present. The test is not what Congress may or may not do. The test is, what is the duty of the President of the United States? Has the Constitution made him the vital, final, effective agency in the making of our laws? Unquestionably it has. Has Congress a right to pass and put in force at once such laws as it sees fit? It has. Can it pass and put in effect any law during the President's absence? It cannot. Is the lawmaking power of the nation to be suspended until the absent President can be reached and a bill which ought to become law at once be presented to him?

It is no answer to say that because the President and the Secretary of State are at the legations of the United States in Rome, in Paris, or in London, therefore they are in the United States. They are not in the United States. In international law, and for the purpose of protecting foreign Ambassadors, the residence of the Ambassador in a foreign country is treated and respected as his country. That is a legal fiction, but not a territorial fact, and we are here dealing with facts, where and how laws are to be made, and not legal fictions arising in their application. To say that the Executive Mansion at the seat of Government and where Congress can present the bill in a reasonable time is removed to an American Embassy abroad because the President has absented himself from the United States, and that the State Department, the legalized depositary of the bill, is in an American Embassy overseas, because the Secretary of State has absented himself from the seat of Government, is to substitute fiction for fact.

But over and above all these considerations, is it not clear that under the Constitution the method of procedure intended was that after Congress had passed a bill and it had been duly engrossed it was to be presented to the President, who was to have ten days to consider it? Those ten days and the consideration of that bill during such time—in other words, the leeway of time for thought, study, and further examination of its subject matter by the President of the United States—was a time provided by the Constitution for the welfare of the people, a time which would finally result in its approval or in the exercise of veto by the people's representative. During those ten days of thought, wisdom, and protection the rights and welfare of the whole people of the United States, as affected by that bill, are, by the Constitution, placed in the keeping of the President. Individual Congressmen were chosen by individual districts, but they might have been absent; Senators were selected by States, but they may not have voted; and no Congressman or no Senator who took part in the passage of that bill was selected by all the people of the United States, so the only representative all the people of the United States have to sense that bill from their standpoint was the President, and when the bill reached him the people at large not only had the assurance of his consideration of the bill for ten days at the seat of Government, but what was vastly more important, they knew that during those ten days the President was at the seat of Government and they could reach him then and there. And they have done it by mail, by wire, by personal visit. A public man has said, "Strangely speaking, the mail of the President is the pulse of the people." This great, much used right of every man in the nation to communicate by mail, wire, or personal presence with the President has been one of the great safeguards against unwise legislation and has opened the eyes of more than one President to the will of the people, which, after all, is the supreme law. Presidents have time and again said—and it was in the spirit of the Constitution for them to say it—that they wanted to know the will of the people as to proposed legislation, and it was the people's right to make it known to them. But the absence of the President during a session of Congress is a practical denial of this right of the people. Are the people to send that mail overseas? Are they to stop writing? Are laws to be signed or vetoed in the atmosphere of Europe or of America? Shall the absence of the President lead Congress to inaction and passing no bills during that absence? In case bills are passed, shall they be laid aside for presentation until the President's return, or sent overseas to him? In case they are sent overseas and started on their return with his objections, and a bill be lost and not returned to the House within the ten-day limit, shall such bill become a law by virtue of its non-return, although the President had noted his objections and started it overseas?

Leaving aside all question of the propriety of the President absenting himself from the seat of Government; leaving aside all question of the vast importance to the people of the United States of this reconstruction period of our own, and leaving aside the unwritten law of the nation which time has graven on its national conscience, the call of duty to the President when Congress is in session is to be at the seat of Government.

Quinito Valverde.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems strange that THE TIMES should have failed to comment upon the death of Quinito Valverde, the famous composer of "The Land of Joy," whose first production her [illegible] instant popularity and appreciation from lovers of Spanish art in America.

From early boyhood, Valverde showed his inclination to a musical career. Following in the footsteps of his father, a celebrated musician, Quinito, at 14 years of age, came into the limelight with the performance of his first work, "Con las de Caln." After that, his career was easily assured; his fame spread to Paris, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Havana. Although it is known to few, many of Valverde's musical compositions have found their way into the scores of more than one musical production which has achieved world-wide fame. Some of these are taken from Valverde's "Marcha de Cadiz," "El Pobre Valbuena," and others. His latest works, "Sol de Espana," "La Senorita 1918," and "Sevilla de mis Amores," were produced in Mexico shortly before his death and won the enthusiastic acclaim of that music-loving people.

Quinito Valverde made a good deal of money with his productions and spent it as easily. His purse was always open to his friends and to those who under the guise of friendship sought his aid. A true son of Spain, his was a joyful and happy temperament, combined with a streak of bohemianism which drove him to wander through many lands, ever in search of new emotions and inspirations.

The fate of Valverde bears a striking similarity to that of Granados, whose one and only operatic production in New York seemed so brilliant a passage of what might be expected from the pen of this gifted composer. Like Granados, Valverde "touched nothing that he did not adorn." Both sought to adorn their art with the rich embellishments of harmonious color and setting so dear to the hearts of the sons of Spain. Both gave of their best to America, and, in her usual generous way, America was quick to respond with the rich gifts lavished on those who have found the open sesame to her gates.

The Capture of Vaux.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the Sunday issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES of Aug. 11, 1918, you published a picture in the Pictorial Supplement of the town of Vaux, France, and stated that this town was captured on July 1, 1918, by the United States Marines.

You are absolutely in error. Vaux, just west of Chateau-Thierry, was taken, after an intense artillery bombardment, by battalions of the 9th and 23d Infantry, assisted on the right in the vicinity of Hill 204 by a battalion from a French regiment. The marines at that time were holding the Bois Belleau northeast of Berresche and five miles from the village of Vaux.

Not for a moment would I attempt to detract from the splendid valor of the marines, but I do object in the name of the dead and wounded of two regular army regiments, who by their magnificent work drove the boche out of Vaux and occupied the town.

On the day of the attack I commanded a battalion of the 23d Infantry on the outskirts of Vaux, and my battalion happened to be between Vaux and the marines, who had no part in the fight whatever. The marines were busy elsewhere, and I don't think a dozen of them ever saw Vaux in their lives. Our attack on Vaux was planned by General Lewis. General Harbord commanded the marines.

'BORIS GODUNOW' GIVEN IN ITALIAN

Didur Ably Sings Title Role in Moussorgsky's Russian Opera of "The People."

STRIKING STAGE PICTURES

But Many Stretches of Gloom in a Performance That Dragged Woefully at Times.

By JAMES GIBBONS HUNEKER.

Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunow" was sung last night for the first time this season at the Metropolitan Opera House. The artists who participated in the performance were Adamo Didur, in the title rôle; Raymonde Delaunois, as Teodoro; Mary Mellish, (début,) as Xenia; Flora Perini, Nurse; Angelo Bada, Schouisky; Mario Laurenti, Tchelkaloff; Leon Rothier, Brother Pimenn; Paul Althouse, Dmitri; Louise Homer, Marina; De Segurola, Varlaam; Pietro Audisio, Missail; Marie Mattfeld, the Innkeeper, and Albert Reiss, the Simpleton; Rossi, Reschiglian, Schlegel, and Paltrinieri composed the rest of the cast. Gennaro Papi was the conductor. The opera was sung in Italian.

To enter into sympathy with Russian music we should remember that the national spirit pervades its masterpieces; this is a truism, yet with a few exceptions there is no other country whose music is so deeply impregnated with its native idiom as Russia's. Even the so-called "cosmopolitanism" of Tschaikowsky is superficial; he leaned heavily on Liszt and Berlioz, yet the booming melancholy and orgiastic frenzy of the Russian may be heard in his symphonies. But in Modeste Moussorgsky we have the real musical Primitive. With Emerson he would have agreed that "whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist." With him rebellion against law and order revealed itself in an abhorrence of scholastic training. He sought to achieve originality without the inevitable monotonous climb to the peak of Parnassus. He would not, or could not, take the pains of mastering the rudiments of his art. And, perhaps, this proved his salvation. Certainly the result outweighs the evil—"Boris." But as he did not thoroughly study orchestration, one of the penalties he paid was that his friend Rimsky-Korsakov "edited" "Boris." In 1896 a new edition appeared, containing purely practical changes, as Colvocoressi notes; but the clumsy orchestration largely remains the work of the composer. His other opera, "La Khovanchtchina," was scored by Korsakov, edited and revised; what picture experts call "restored." The musical baggage carried by Moussorgsky down the corridor of time is not heavy, but it is significant.

His realism, so much emphasized by the critic, Stassow, and others is the outcome of his enormous sincerity, and the reduction to a bare simplicity of the musicial idea. His vigorous rhythmic sense enabled him to express gestures, motions, and unusual situations that on first hearing not only seem bizarre, but extra-musical. Many of his "reforms" are not such, rather the outcome of his passion for simplification. The framework of "Boris" is commonplace, a plethora of choral numbers being the most marked feature. In the original draft there was an absence of the feminine element, but after much pressure the composer was persuaded to weave several scenes into the general texture, and it must be confessed that these interpolations were the weakest in the book.

It is the primal power of the composition that sweeps us along, not its old-fashioned form. But a man is never entirely the master of his genius, and, while Moussorgsky fought the stars in their courses, he nevertheless poured upon paper the richest musical images and colors, created characters, and glorified "the People." Like Dostoievsky, he "went to the People," to the folksmelody, and in Pushkin he found the historical story of Czar Boris, criminal, neuropathic and half-mad, which he manipulated to serve his ends. The chorus is the protagonist, despite the stirring dramatic scenes allotted to Boris. The "People," that mystic quality in Russian art, must have its spokesman. Notwithstanding this, every tune that may be found in Pratsch's Russian Anthology and utilized by the new composers, was composed—some time or other—by one man. There is no such thing as democratic art, though a work of art is all the stronger when it voices the joys and woes of the "People"—which is not quite the same thing as being composed by the "People." The tree is rooted in the soil, yet the tree stands by itself in the forest.

Moussorgsky's stubbornness is both a virtue and a vice. His sincerity covers a multitude of ineptitudes, but it is a splendid sincerity. His partiality for unrelated tones in his melodic scheme led to the dissociated harmonies in his operatic score, and this same "Boris" has much influenced latter-day French music; it was a source from which drank Debussy, Dukas, and Ravel, as their more sophisticated scores show. "Boris" is virgin soil. That is why I call him Primitive. Nature made him deaf to the music of others. He achieved the naïve attitude toward music which in painting is the very essence of the Flemish Primitives. In his half-savage craving for absolute originality—the most impossible of "absolutes"—he sought to abstract from art its chief components. He would have it in its naked innocence: sharply rhythmic, undefiled by academic treatment, never swerving from the "truth" of the poem. This devotion to the verbal text and dramatic action out-Wagners Wagner. Moussorgsky did not approve of Wagner's gigantic orchestral apparatus; he wished to avoid anything that would distract the attention of the hearer from the stage; for him Wagner was too much the symphonist, not enough the dramatist. Above all, action, and little thematic development in the customary manner. He employed leading motives charily, and, as he disliked intricate polyphony, his music moves in massive blocks, following the semi-detached tableaux. "Boris" is nothing if not massive—and it is strikingly individual music.

The performance dragged, at times woefully dragged. The liturgical strain which is a red thread in the warp of the work needs no undue emphasis if monotony is to be avoided. In the early scenes monotony sat heavily on our shoulders and the atmosphere was what old Dr. Johnson would have described as "unpleasated gloom." Luckily Didur was in good form and he had great moments in the second act. He was called before the curtain six times, and it was not one too many. He is ever a fine dramatic artist. Miss Mellish had such a small part that it would not be fair to judge her effort. Louise Homer was appropriately wooden in the rôle of the ligneous Marina. Mr. Althouse made a fiery lover, and the garden duo went very well. The inn scene, too, was amusing and the gloom temporarily lifted, but soon returned. The chorus, as might be supposed, was splendid, and the stage pictures were striking. Withal, "Boris is "caviare to the general."

OPPOSES LABOR BOARD.

President Says Existing Agencies Can Better Handle Problem.

General Ballington Booth, President of the Volunteers of America, yesterday gave out a letter from President Wilson on the subject of labor and employment in the readjustment period, written in reply to the suggestion by General Booth that a permanent reconstruction commission be appointed to supervise all problems affecting labor. The President replied that he thought the problems could be handled better by agencies already in existence.

In his letter to the President General Booth wrote of "the almost certain displacement of large numbers of men and women engaged in the production of war necessities" by the return of the soldiers, and added that one of the reasons that prompted him to write to the President was "the evidence that our workers convey to me of signs already of apprehension of economic trouble following the end of the war."

It was General Booth's suggestion that the commission would have power "to act, not merely to advise on how to act," on all the questions affecting labor. One of the duties of this proposed commission, as outlined in the letter to the President, would have been to prevent "displacement of labor on all Government and war contracts until assured that the said labor will find an outlet in other trades and activities," and to settle "all disputes that may arise out of a necessary curtailment of labor on war contracts."

Another duty of the commission would have been "the application of such laws and orders for the re-settlement of returned soldiers and sailors as may be passed by Congress, so as to reinforce existing labor in food production and to prevent sick and convalescent soldiers and sailors from being thrown on the open market without adequate provision or opportunity to begin normal life again." The President's reply read:

The White House, Washington, Nov. 18, 1918.

My Dear General Booth:

Your letter of Nov. 15 touches very grave and important matters which I have had very much at heart. I am just now at any rate, of the opinion that they can be handled better by the agencies I have already created than by a new commission which would have to orient itself in a great many matters with which the men about me here are already familiar, but we are all of us of the opinion that the great matter of reconstruction should be handled along the general lines you have so thoughtfully sketched.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

General Ballington Booth, 34 West Twenty-eighth Street, New York.

Problems of readjustment of labor after the war and the possibility of a period of unemployment were discussed last night at a meeting of the Personnel Managers' Club of Queens County in the Queens County Chamber of Commerce at Long Island City by E. B. Saunders of the Division of Information of the Department of Labor and Thomas W. Churchill, counsel for the United States Employment Service.

WILLIAM T. EVANS, ART COLLECTOR, DIES

President of Mills & Gibb Corporation Expires at His Home in Glen Ridge at 75.

PATRON OF YOUNG ARTISTS

He Gave 160 Paintings from His Collection to the National Gallery in Washington.

William T. Evans, President of the Mills & Gibb Corporation since its reorganization and for many years the head of the New York dry goods firm of Mills & Gibb, died last night at his home in Glen Ridge, N. J., in his seventy-sixth year. Death was due to a general breakdown caused by illness and overwork during the reorganization of his firm after it was forced into receivership in 1916.

He was born in Ireland in 1843 and was brought to this country when he was a child. He was educated in the public schools at Scotch Plains, N. J., and after his graduation from the architectural department of the New York Free School he became an employe of the old firm of E. S. Jaffray & Co. When Philo L. Mills and John Gibb founded their dry goods store here they engaged Mr. Evans to do all the financial work for them and in this place he remained throughout the life of that company.

Educated as he was for architecture and art work, he became interested in art collections early in life, and in later years he was better known as a collector of masterpieces in portraits, and landscapes than he was in the commercial world. One of his greatest interests was that of aiding young artists to make their way in the world, and among the men who remained his friends when they became famous for the help and encouragement he had given them early in life were Henry W. Ranger and Blakelock.

The first collection of pictures gathered by Mr. Evans was sold by him in 1890, and then he began a collection of American pictures that was sold by him in 1900. Some of the pictures sold by him then for small sums are now valued at from $10,000 to $15,000. Some of them were Homer Martin's "Newport Neck," Wyant's "Westchester Hills," and Inness's "Georgia Pines." As soon as he had disposed of this collection he began again to collect pictures from modern artists that struck his fancy and in eight years he gathered more than 200 pictures.

While friends were anticipating another dispersal sale he announced that he would break up the collection among museums, and fortwith he gave 160 paintings to the newly-founded National Gallery in Washington. It formed the nucleus in the new galleries there for other gifts to the nation, and was placed there under his name. Sixty others were given the museum in Montclair, N. J., with smaller numbers to museums in other towns in New Jersey.

Pictures that remained after these gifts had been made were sold in the Hotel Plaza in 1913, and before the collector could begin his work again his firm went into receivership and he was forced to confine his full time to his business. Few of his pictures remain in the possession of the family. While Mills & Gibb was in the hands of the receivers actions were brought against several artists who were members of the National Academy of Design to compel them to return money given them for pictures. It was alleged that the purchase prices of the pictures had been paid to them with checks on the firm. Among the artists were Childe Hassam, J. Alden Wier, Lillian Genth, and Ballard Williams.

F. Carter Childs.

F. Carter Childs, a former newspaperman, and recently director of the W. S. S. drive in Brooklyn, died yesterday at his home, 1,718 Nottingham Road, Brooklyn, of influenza and pneumonia. Mr. Childs was taken ill ten days ago following a football game at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, which he arranged for the benefit of the United War Work Campaign. He had also served as one of the publicity managers of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee.

Mr. Childs was born in Clinton, Mo., thirty-five years ago. He joined the staff of The Brooklyn Eagle about nine years ago, serving as its Albany correspondent, and in 1914 he was appointed secretary to F. J. H. Kracke, then Commissioner of Bridges, and subsequently was appointed as Deputy Commissioner.

AMHO Body Clothing

is simply better underwear—better because more care is bestowed upon it from the choice of the raw material to the last detail of the finished garment.

The AMERICAN HOSIERY CO.

established in 1868, has built a reputation for painstaking skill in all it does.

The men who founded it and those who have carried along its traditions have always had high respect for the importance of the work they are doing.

When they think of a garment to be worn "next the skin," they think of it as clothing for the body and not as underwear—hence AMHO Body Clothing in all its dignity of comfort and health for the body.

Ask to see the word AMHO on the label of body clothing for men, women and children.

Hot Food for the Workman

IT used to be that the so-called "working-man" was satisfied to take his luncheon cold. Now that every man in the country is a "working-man," more comfort is demanded.

With the Theroz Mess Kit the heartiest of "riveters" or out-door workman can have a man's size meal: hot soup, beans and frankfurters—know anything better for a hungry man than tempting hot frankfurters?—and coffee ready in ten to twelve minutes. There's no fuss or bother. The Kit set up, has two boilers at work, and a warming pan. The freshly boiled coffee and soup

Income Assured

Since 1912 the Public Service Co. of Nor. Illinois has paid 6% on its Preferred Stock. It has paid from 4% to 7% on its Common in that time—7% during the war years of 1917 and 1918.

As further evidence of this remarkable record of sustained earning ability, the Company shows net earnings over double the interest on its total funded debt.

WHY THE LONG TERM BOND NOW?

Because, by the purchase at present prices one is assured of a satisfactory income for the future, no matter how low future interest rates may be;

because, high grade, seasoned bonds of this type may be had at prices seemingly all out of proportion to their value when considered from the standpoint of stability growth and earnings of the company issuing them.

We offer for investment at prices to yield over 6% bonds of a company whose net earnings each year are over two times the amount required to pay all interest charges; the power furnished, of hydro-electric generation.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Decline Under Lead of Railroad Issues—Call Money at 5½ Per Cent.

Stocks suffered a substantial reaction yesterday under heavy selling, which was most pronounced in some of the railroads and industrial issues that were prominent in the rise of October. Considered as a whole the railroad list was under more pressure than the others and comment heard in the financial district indicated that traders had been influenced by possibilities contained in the united action of railroad security holders to hasten the return of the carriers to their owners. The average level of prices among the more active stocks declined between 2 and 3 points, with larger recessions in particular directions. The extent of the selling movement may be visualized by stating that the day's turnover was close to a million shares.

The downward movement appeared to be a continuation of the decline which was gathering force on Friday and Saturday. In early dealings prices acted fairly well, but it was noted in a short time that offerings of the railroad shares were increasing in volume and reaching into a steadily broadening list. There was small question but that the signs of a coming struggle over the apparent tendency toward continued Government control of the railroads and other public utilities had more effect than any other development on the course of trading. At the same time the Street could find little encouragement in respect to international occurrences over the spread of Bolshevism in Germany. The character of the selling seemed to indicate that commitments on the short side had much to do with the shrinkage of prices. This was borne out in the fact that the output of stocks came in well-defined waves, between which the market showed little recuperative power. The weakness of stocks was contagious among bonds without, however, bringing about any sharply defined backward steps. Liberty bonds were not exempt from the tendency in the other markets, declines running from a quarter to more than a half point in some of the issues. The Fourth 4¼s at the closing price of 97.40 were .60 below the level at which they were stabilized so long after their entrance to dealings.

Discussions of current events in both bank and brokerage offices showed that followers of security values began the new week with a fuller comprehension than before of various uncertainties which lay ahead. Quite possibly these may be overestimated in following days, as has frequently been the case, especially among speculators, but altogether the reflection of sentiment in the markets was not surprising. Whether or not liquidation was an important item among bonds and stocks, it was more than likely that speculative holdings of traders who had grown tired of waiting for a profit came out in quantity. The money market brought forth no new development to promote selling; on the contrary, call money was in freer supply than last week, going as low as 5½ per cent., compared with the 6 per cent. level in effect all of the previous week. There were reports that offerings of time money from interior institutions were larger than for some days past, with a fair amount of six months' funds in the market. The statement of the Clearing House banks on Saturday offered, in a way, a forecast of easier money for a time at least through the decline of more than $100,000,000 in loans.

Foreign exchange rates changed only fractionally with neutral quotations showing about as little alteration as the others.

CLOVER LEAF FIGHTS M'ADOO'S AUTHORITY

Stockholders Block Delivery of Cars, Declaring Price to be Exorbitant.

Temporary Injunction Against the Receiver Will Be Argued in Toledo on Dec. 16.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 25.—A temporary restraining order was issued in the United States District Court here today against William G. McAdoo, as Director General of Railroads, instructing the receiver of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western (Clover Leaf) Railroad not to accept cars, sign contracts, or to do anything that would jeopardize or compromise the interests of the stockholders of the road. Hearing on the injunction was set for Dec. 16.

The case in question, said to be the first in the United States wherein the power of the Director General of Railroads is attacked, is one in which the stockholders' protective committee of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western seeks to prevent Mr. McAdoo from compelling the road to accept 1,250 freight cars which the committee asserts the road does not now need and for which the committee declares the road would have to pay an exorbitant price.

The Court also made the Director General a personal party defendant to the suit.

In court procedure attorneys for the Railroad Administration stated that the records showed that the receiver for the road had requested the cars.

The petition against W. G. McAdoo filed by the Stockholders' Protective Committee of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railroad Company in Toledo yesterday was prepared by Henry Wollman, chief council for the committee. It alleges that in August, 1918, the receiver, W. L. Ross, was notified by Director General McAdoo that he had decided to allot to the railroad 500 double-sheathed box cars and 750 hopper cars at an approximate total cost of $3,372,250.

The committee, of which Jules S. Bache is Chairman, asserts that the order is inexpedient, as the road has sufficient equipment acquired before the war, and that the price the Director General has named is an advance of approximately 300 per cent. over the cost of similar cars in normal periods. The petition reads in part:

"It is manifest that the period of one year and nine months fixed as the limit for Federal control after the proclamation of peace will shortly begin to run, and that there is no reasonable probability that said railroad will receive from the Government an allowance of more than 5 or 10 per cent. by way of depreciation allowance upon the cost of said cars, leaving the remainder of the cost thereof, amounting to 90 or 95 per cent. of such cost, to be paid by said company."

"Said Stockholders' Committee is informed and believes and therefore avers that * * * said Director General of Railroads has refused to cancel said contracts for said freight cars and is insisting that said contracts shall be carried out and that the tremendous profits which are being made or will be made by the concerns engaged in manufacturing said freight cars thereunder shall be paid by said railroad company as aforesaid, even at the cost of its complete ruin."

NOW FOR FEDERAL OWNERSHIP

John J. Mitchell Converted as to Railroads by Events.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—John J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust and Savings Company and a Director on four railroad boards, among them the Pennsylvania, has reached the conclusion that Government ownership and operation of railroads furnish the only adequate solution of the situation. He said today:

"Events which have transpired since the period of the war have led me to change completely my views toward Government control or ownership of railroads and transportation utilities. I was opposed to such a proposition in the beginning, but now believe that the salvation of the railroads lies in Government control.

"A reversion of the properties to the original owners would mean a kind of chaos and inability to meet conditions of labor, railroad credit and rates. The people as a whole will stand more from the Government or municipality than from private ownership of the transportation properties.

"Under present conditions it would mean almost bankruptcy for a number of lines to be given back to the original owners. Their credit has been destroyed. Under the heavy expenses under which they are now operating they would not be able to borrow money, and they would not be able to maintain rates or cause a readjustment of wages without serious difficulties. These things the Government can do.

"There is in the air a spirit bred by the war and special events in Europe that cannot be ignored, and it points toward Government and municipal ownership or control.

"This view of the railroad situation you will find is general among the conservative railroad interests of the West. We have all been obliged to change our opinions because of the changed conditions."

McADOO ON ROADS' OWNERSHIP

Mind Not Yet Made Up as to Federal Acquisition.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 25.—Secretary McAdoo, who is here for a conference with railroad officials of the Southeast, refused today to discuss a story in The Providence Journal that he resigned because he was opposed to Government ownership of railroads and similar utilities. He said none had a right to quote him as to Government ownership of the railroad, adding:

"I have wanted to get all the practical experience possible before making up my mind as to just what is the most advantageous thing to be done. When I am ready with my conclusions, I may have something to say as to what I consider the most feasible solution."

Mr. McAdoo explained that the trip he was now on was merely part of the performance of his duty as administrator and bore no particular relation to his early retirement. When asked if he were getting all affairs in shape for his successor, he said:

"I hope things are already in good shape, but this simply means that I am going to keep at my job until the day I leave it."

WANTS ROADS RETURNED.

Untermyer Says Government Ownership Can Then Be Settled.

Samuel Untermyer said yesterday in a discussion of the railroad situation that if a struggle was to come over the question of Government ownership it should be fought out after the railroads had been returned to their owners. He is senior general counsel to the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities and his comment supplemented the statement issued by S. Davies Warfield, President of the Association, on Sunday.

In Mr. Untermyer's opinion the people should have opportunity to pass on Government ownership of the carriers, but prior to the expression of the public will he would have the carriers returned to the status that existed before the war.

"The immediate tasks," he stated, "to which the Association is about to apply itself will be:

"1. To put a stop to the further carrying out of the far-reaching program for unifying the railroad systems of the country on which the Railroad Administration has embarked and which involves expenditures and credits of many hundreds of millions of dollars belonging to the security holders, which the roads do not need under private ownership and for which many of them cannot afford to pay.

"2. To halt the diversion of traffic and abandonment of roads and parts of roads incidental to the process of unification and dismemberment, so that it may remain possible to return the roads as Congress intended.

"3. To secure their prompt return, to their owners as nearly intact as possible and in a financial condition that will not force them into bankruptcy as the result of expenditures made by the Railroad Administration at the expense of the roads and without their consent.

"I think it will be agreed by all fair-minded men, regardless of whether they are for or against Government ownership, that the good faith of the Government is pledged to this action, and every day it is longer deferred it will complicate the carrying out of that promise.

"The honest advocates, as well as the opponents of eventual Government ownership of public utilities, will agree in insisting that if the Government is to acquire the roads it must be accomplished by the constitutional means of adequate compensation to their owners and not by subterfuge or indirection, nor by 'strong arm' methods of confiscation or quasi-confiscation under cover of legal forms.

"When the National Association of Holders of Railroad Securities retained me to defend it against the oppressive terms that were first proposed by the operating contract tendered the railroads by the Government, which were afterward materially modified as a result of long months of negotiation and protest, the committee fully understood my views on this economic question.

"I accepted the retainer because I was and am satisfied that the then proposed operating contract was unjust and ruinous to the security owners, and that if the railroad executives were permitted to accept it in its then form out of fear or timidity lest they go counter to an impatient and unreasonable public sentiment in time of war, it would mean semi-confiscation.

"It was a time when moral courage was needed and the association supplied the courage in which the railroad executives were sadly lacking.

"Even in its present greatly modified for I regard the contract as burdensome and unfair.

"I have accepted the present retainer because I held it to be the bounden duty of the Government to make good to the owners of railroads the promise that was made them by the Federal Control act, under which their properties were taken purely as a war measure, that they would be returned intact.

"Only after the Government has redeemed that promise should the struggle over Government ownership begin on its merits. The Railroad Administration should not be permitted in the meantime, under cover of war necessities which have disappeared, to continue its so-called process of unifying the railroad systems of the country so that the express mandate of the law for their return in the same condition of repair and equipment cannot be carried out.

"I realize that there are grave differences of opinion among patriotic men as to the wisdom of the policy of Government ownership, and that the people should be granted the opportunity to pass squarely on the question after the status quo that existed prior to the war has been fully restored, and any action taken by the Railroad Administration that would tend to embarrass this free choice by the people between Government ownership and private ownership should be discouraged, and, if possible, prevented.

"Thus far little irreparable harm has been done in the way of unification and obliteration of the identities of the roads, but unless the comprehensive program that has been outlined is stopped now the opportunity of the people for a free expression of their decision will be greatly handicapped and the roads will be forced into Government ownership to prevent a condition of bankruptcy due to Government action on almost any terms that Congress may determine to impose, regardless of the true value of the properties and without just compensation.

"No advocate of fair play, regardless of his economic views on government ownership, wants to see such a result, and I am in hearty accord with the determination of the association to secure the immediate return of the properties to their private owners, and to prevent their being taken without just compensation for their use during Federal control. The dictates of common honesty require that the promise of the Government be now redeemed. If, after that, the Government decides to acquire the properties by the orderly constitutional process of just compensation and the people approve, that will be another story. We will cross that bridge when we come to it. The duty of the hour is to stop dismemberment and emasculation of the properties and to return them to their owners."

OFFER HELP TO McADOO.

Railroad Employes Propose to Give to Make Up His Salary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A telegram signed by representatives of employes of railroads operated out of St. Louis, received at Director General McAdoo's office today, pledged the employes to give $2,000 a month as part of the Director General's salary to keep him from retiring.

"We are opposed to your resignation," said the telegram, "and are heartily in sympathy with your financial straits."

The telegram was signed by J. H. Kirkland and H. J. Garrigan, representing Wabash employes, and O. E. Sumner, representing Missouri Pacific employes.

ATLANTA, Nov. 25.—"Well, I'm glad somebody appreciates my financial straits," Director General McAdoo said today, when informed of the action of railway employes at St. Louis. Mr. McAdoo, who came here on an inspection trip, added that he intended to resume the practice of law.

Will Open Branch in Brussels.

Permission for the Guaranty Trust Company to open a branch office at Brussels, Belgium, has been granted by the State Banking Department. Edward de Lima of the Paris office of the Guaranty Trust Company will leave shortly to take charge of the management at Brussels. The trust company plans to have the entire Belgium situation examined and reported upon by W. L. Honnold, who has been connected with the Belgian Relief Association in this city. The trust company expects to aid in the reconstruction plans which will shortly be under way in Belgium.

Newsdealers Fight License Law.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 25.—A rule to show cause why a writ of certiorari should not be granted, returnable in Newark on Saturday, was obtained today from Justice Gummere, sitting in Trenton, by former State Senator R. S. Hudspeth of Jersey City, as counsel for the East Orange Newsdealers Association, who are opposing enforcement of an ordinance recently enacted by the East Orange City Counsel requiring that all dealers be licensed.

BOARD NEED NOT REPLY.

Court Rejects Effort of the B. R. T. to Prolong Car Litigation.

An attempt of the four surface line companies of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system to compel the Public Service Commission to file a separate reply to the answer of each four companies to the demand of the commission that 250 new steel cars be added to their equipment, was defeated yesterday by an order of Justice Benedict of the Kings County Supreme Court, who decided that the replies need not be made. The order for the new cars was made by the commission nearly two years ago. In protesting against the demand that the commission file replies, William L. Ransom, the commission's chief counsel, said:

"These companies seek not only to delay the day when they must buy these needed cars but they hope to escape buying them at all, through involving the case in a maze of technicalities which the statue specifically forbids."

He also said that the answers of the companies fill 450 closely printed pages, and that much of the matter was as irrelevant as if the Koran or the late Kaiser's many addresses to his troops had been inserted in them.

FARM LOANS $139,378,000.

Only $86,000 Overdue on Advances Made Since March, 1917.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — Farmers have borrowed $139,378,000 from the twelve Federal farm loan banks since their organization in March, 1917. In reporting this today the Farm Loan Board announced that capital stock of the bank, originally subscribed mainly by the Government, had increased from $9,000,000 to $15,975,000 through additional subscriptions by farm loan associations, and that bonds amounting to $140,122,000 had been issued.

The farmers are making their payments promptly. The report shows that only $86,000 in loans is overdue. Delinquency occurred almost entirely in sections where there had been crop failures.

Three banks—those of Wichita, Spokane, and Houston—have an actual surplus, and the Spokane and St. Paul banks will soon begin to repay the Government for the stock originally subscribed.

EXTENDS CREDIT TO FRANCE

Japanese Bankers' Syndicate Arranges $25,000,000 Issue.

A credit amounting to $25,000,000 has been arranged in Japan for the French Government according to the Financial Commission of the Imperial Japanese Government in this country. The Japanese bankers' syndicate, which some time ago financed a new credit for the British Government, is handling the new issue of French bonds, which are to appear in denominations of Japanese currency.

The issue is intended to adjust the payments for goods ordered in Japan by the French Government. These bonds will be known as the French Government Yen-Exchequer bonds of 1918. They will mature in 1921, will carry 6 per cent. interest, and will be offered at 98.

COTTON IS UNSETTLED.

Early Gains of 50 Points in Active Months Lost in Quiet Market.

In a light and inactive market yesterday, prices were alternately strong and weak. In the morning the firm tone of the list was attributed to the sentiment of the trade over the proclamation sent out Sunday, signed by the Governors of eight of the cotton producing States, urging planters, merchants, and Southern banks and business men to hold the staple for not less than 35 cents on the basis of middling cotton. The winter weather in some sections of the cotton belt, with snow in parts of Texas and Oklahoma, likewise had a bullish effect. The market opened firm, 15 to 25 points higher than Saturday's closing quotations, December contracts being the most active and, supporting the rest of the list, sold up to 28.90c, January going to 28.25c, March 27.53c, and May 27.11c.

At these prices these options were selling up to 50 points better than Saturday's closing. A later reaction, however, on local and commission house selling caused the loss of all of these gains.

In the afternoon the market was weak and reactionary, prices moving in decided fashion on a declining scale. The movement was in sympathy with the weak securities markets of the Street, and the liquidation caused a recession in the general list from 13 to 50 points below the closing quotations on Saturday.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,591 packages. Market short of nearly all fresh table grades and prices higher and firm. Renovated a little firmer, and ladles and packing stock show further advance of about ½c. Creamer, higher than extras, a pound, 66½@67c; extras, 92 score, 66c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 60@65½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 56@59½c; lower grades, 52@55c; unsalted, higher than extras, 65½@66c; extras, 67½@68c; firsts, 62@67c; seconds, 57½@61½c; State dairy tubs, firsts, 65@66½c; good to prime, 60@64c; common to fair, 49@59c; renovated, extras, 50@51c; firsts, 47@48c; lower grades, 42@46c; imitation creamery, firsts, 48@48c; ladles, current make, firsts, 41½@42½c; seconds, 40@40½c; lower grades, 38@39½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 39½@40c; No. 2, 38½@39c; lower grades, 36@36c.

EGGS, 4,657 packages. There was a very close clearance of fresh-gathered eggs last week, some receivers were short of supplies for urgent needs, and arrivals are still lighter, and advices indicate small supplies in transit for the week. Market firm and firm. Receivers have anything suitable for the better class of trade, having pretty full control of prices. Some of the ordinary qualities of fresh and late gathered eggs are doing rather better. Inferior held stock moves slowly. Storage eggs continue wanted beyond the supply available, and the market is strong, with natural values for most lots above the prices that can be realized under the Food Administration regulations. Nearby white eggs are in light supply, and fancy new-laid qualities are scarce and firm. Some sales of choice Californias at an advance over recent quotations. Fresh-gathered extras, nearby, 80c; other sections, 78c; firsts, 67@70c; seconds, 62@65c; undergrades, 52@60c; dirties, No. 1, 48@50c; No. 2 and poorer, 43@47c; checks, good to choice, dry, 40@45c; undergrades, 38@42c; refrigerators, 42@51c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 92@95c; ordinary to prime, 70@90c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 70@92c; pullet whites, 70@75c; Pacific Coast whites, firsts to finest, 90c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 68@86c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 76@80c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 65@74c.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Harris Forbes & Co. have issued a circular dealing with more than 100 issues of government, municipal, railroad, and public utility bonds, yielding from 4½ to 7 per cent.

For ten months of this year the Twin City Rapid Transit Company reports net revenue of $2,276,387. After deducting fixed charges and taxes, there is a net income of $648,113, a decrease of $665,917 from the corresponding period of last year.

The Grand Trunk Railway will apply to the Canadian Parliament for authority to create and issue additional consolidated debentures to bear interest at 4 per cent. to an amount upon which the annual interest shall not exceed £100,000.

The Washington Gas Light Company has received permission from the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia to issue and sell $662,000 fifty-year general mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, the proceeds to be used to repay moneys advanced by it prior to Dec. 31, 1917, for betterments, and to pay for construction now under way.

"Commercial Banking Practice," a book of 136 pages, which has just been issued by the National Bank of Commerce, contains an alphabetically arranged compilation of the statutory provisions and Federal Reserve Board rulings and regulations governing acceptances.

Prepare for Peace

Second only to the successful prosecution of the war is preparation for the inevitable reaction and readjustments of peace. To conduct business today without thought of the future would be a serious mistake.

Far-sighted business men are taking precautions now which will preserve the stability of their resources. They are taking advantage of the complete protection afforded by American Credit Insurance.

There is nothing so safe in any emergency of credit accounts as The American's Unlimited Policy of Credit Insurance.

Manufacturers and jobbers, get the full particulars of this constructive, stabilizing service.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Liquidation in heavy volume made for a very weak market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices were about the lowest of the session and represented losses from one to more than seven points. The market was heavy from the outset. Occasional rallies were but fractional in extent and were, as a rule, followed by renewed selling, which made for lower levels.

ASK WOMEN'S AID IN NEW FOOD SAVING

250 Up-State Delegates Hear Conservation Plan to Help in Rebuilding Europe.

WILL BEGIN NEXT SUNDAY

F. C. Walcott, Speaking for Hoover, Declares First Duty to Feed Nations Germany Destroyed.

Food Administrators from cities and counties up-State met yesterday in the Plaza Hotel at the call of the National Food Administration to discuss the new conservation campaign that will begin next Sunday. Charles E. Treman, Food Administrator for the State outside the metropolitan district, was Chairman, and the principal speaker was Fred C. Walcott of the Federal Food Administration, who came to New York as the personal representative of Mr. Hoover.

Other speakers were Arthur Williams, New York City Food Administrator; Professor H. E. Babcock of the Bureau of Conservation, and John Mitchell, head of the Federal Food Board and the State Food Commission. The definite program for the conservation campaign is expected to be made public at Washington some time this week.

There were 250 delegates at the meeting.

The end of the war was only the close of a chapter, Mr. Walcott declared, in bringing his personal message from Mr. Hoover. There still remained, he said, the work of feeding the world.

"What is our duty?" Mr. Walcott asked, after mentioning the German surrender. "Well, it seems to me that it is clear. They can take only what is left, and they are perfectly able to get what is left. We don't have to give them any concern whatever. We are going to give our attention to the starving nations around Germany, that Germany has tried to destroy. We are going to save these if we can."

Mr. Walcott spoke of conditions as they now exist abroad. Famine, he said, is the mother of anarchy. The antidote is food and plenty of it. He outlined what America had already done.

"But there is something more to do," he continued. "Isn't it possible? Is it too high an ideal to hold up before those 110,000,000 of highly spirited, highly intelligent people, whose institutions have now been justified? Our public school system, our public health system, everything that we hold dear has been justified. Three years ago people were discouraged about our own national existence. Now we know we are right.

"In Poland, Rumania, Belgium, their factories are destroyed; no food left, no agricultural implements left. Who is going to form the nucleus of a great building loan association to get them started? Obviously Europe couldn't. They haven't the wealth left; they haven't the time, because they must give all of their resources and energies in a wild scramble to get on their own feet.

"We stand out alone, enormously wealthy, enormously generous, with a high ideal to live up to. I believe we are going to make good in a way that will prove to the world—to the whole world—the advantages of our Government, the advantages of our institutions, to those people that have been ruined by that Prussian philosophy."

MANY BUY WORK OF BLINDED

Lighthouse Sale Offers Novel and Beautiful Handiwork.

There are many interesting things in the Christmas sale of the work of the blind, which opened yesterday at 407 Madison Avenue under the auspices of the New York State Commission for the Blind and the New York State Association for the Blind. There are all sorts of practical and useful things for the house and the workers at the sale were pleased yesterday that among the articles sold were a number of the beautiful woven bags which are among the higher priced goods, but which are useful as well as beautiful.

Almost everything in the sale has its little story. There are charming small dolls, the clothes crocheted in delicate colors by a little old woman who delights in that special work. There are raffia mats which have a style of their own and are exceedingly pretty when used on a bare mahogany table. They are of the white raffia with a deep edge of brown made by another little old woman, but she unfortunately is in the poor house and the money the work brings in gives her a few small comforts. There are hearth brooms made by a man in Syracuse who was discouraged when the work was suggested to him. Now he has a little shop of his own at the rear of his home and the brooms he makes have a distinctive style and quality. There is a blind girl in Brooklyn who has made some unusually pretty handbags on a Swedish loom, with original designs.

"I must look at these," says Harriet, from the Lighthouse for the Blind, who is demonstrating weaving at the sale. With understanding fingers she follows the outline of the bag, "see" how the handle is put on and exclaims at the special features of the work. The sale will continue to Dec. 15. Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Miss Anna Constable, Mrs. Cass Gilbert, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Mrs. Seth Low, and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee are among the assisting patronesses.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Investment buying in the Bronx has shown considerable activity within the last few weeks and brokers report a steadily increasing demand for well situated properties. Apartment house buying has been fairly active and the trend of the market was shown in the sale of four high-class apartments in that borough yesterday, Frederick Brown added to his investment deals there by purchasing from Charles Koeppel the five-story house on the northeast corner of the Grand Concourse and 198th Street, being 2,850 to 2,856 Concourse, a plot 146.6 by 80. It was held at $170,000. Philip Meyrowitz was the broker.

Jacob Blustein bought for investment the five-story apartment building at 911 Tiffany Street, at the junction of Beck Street, fronting 187 feet on the former and 148 feet on the latter. It was held at $110,000 and was sold by Osserman & Gottlieb, who recently acquired it.

The two five-story houses at 1,879 to 1,883 Crotona Avenue, at 176th Street, each on a plot 39 by 109, were purchased by Frank Gantz from Morris Fine. They were held at $66,000.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

Harold C. Mathews sold to a holding company 50 East Sixty-first Street, a four-story dwelling on a lot 20 by 100.5. This is the fourth sale of this property in ten months. It is understood that the new owners will alter the premises into small apartments, for which there is a growing demand in this section. Douglas L. Elliman & Co. negotiated the sale.

Horace S. Ely & Co. sold for the New York Trust Company 8 West Eighty-third Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 15.2 by 102, to a client of H. J. Kern. The purchaser will renovate and occupy the premises.

The property of Frank Bradley, at 319 West Seventy-fourth Street, a four-story and basement dwelling, on a lot 25.6 by 72 9, was sold in foreclosure proceedings yesterday and struck down on a bid of $25,000 to the plaintiff in the action, E. M. Stiger. Joseph P. Day was the auctioneer. The mortgage judgment amounted to about $47,000 and there were back taxes amounting to about $1,800.

Church Buys Morningside Heights Site.

The McIntyre estate sold to the trustees of the Seventh Church of Christ Scientist as a site for a new structure the property at 512 to 520 West 112th Street. The property, which consists of three small houses on a plot 150 by 100.11, is located between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway.

Sale Reported in West Twenty-sixth Street.

The four-story building at 35 West Twenty-sixth Street on a plot 25 by 98.9 is reported to have been sold to an investor. Title to the property stands in the name of William A. Morgan.

Brooklyn.

The two-and-one-half-story dwelling at 1,703 Bath Avenue, has been sold by Meister Building, Inc., to a client for occupancy.

Sales in Queens.

The Permanent Building Corporation, Inc., has purchased from the Rosebern Building Corporation a plot 100 by 100 on the northeast corner of Jerome Avenue and Welling Street, Richmond Hill.

P. Sheel has sold to N. N. F. Meyer a plot 50 by 100 on the north side of Havemeyer Street east of Alburtis Avenue, Corona.

Al. Sprower has sold to J. W. Guilfoyle, a plot 50 by 100 on the east side of 104th Street north of Eighty-sixth Avenue, Richmond Hill.

M. A. Heyman has purchased from J. Levy the improved plot 40 by 100 on the south side of Green Street, north of White Avenue, Jamaica.

Recent Buyers.

The Milligan & Higgins Gelatine Company was the buyer of the build.ngs at 222 and 224 Front Street, sold recently by the Rhinelander estate. The company has occupied the buildings for many years.

Mortgage Loans Placed.

Eugene J. Rusher has placed a first mortgage of $8,000, 5 per cent., five years, on 1,037-1,039 Forest Avenue, for the E. J. B. Realty Corporation, and a first mortgage of $25,000, 5½ per cent., three years, on the northeast corner of Boston Road and East 164th Street, for Elizabeth Anderson.

Realty Notes.

The Real Estate Division raised a total of $28,235 in its United War Work campaign. The drive closed last night, and it was announced that this amount represented 275 subscriptions by individuals and firms.

Horace S. Ely & Co. has leased the residence at 22 West Eighth Street to Richard Bennett, the actor, for a term of years. Mr. Bennett recently disposed of his home at Park Hill, Yonkers.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The southwestern depression appears to have moved to the mouth of the Rio Grande, leaving a secondary centre over Southern Arizona, and pressure is again falling in the Pacific States.

Pressure is also low over the Northeast and generally high elsewhere, especially in the Central Rocky Mountain region, with the result that snow continued generally in Colorado, New Mexico, Northern Arizona, Oklahoma, and Northwestern Texas, while rains have fallen elsewhere in the West Gulf States and in Southern Mississippi.

There was no other precipitation of consequence. It is much colder in the extreme Southwest, with a temperature tonight of 18 degrees above zero at Amarillo, Texas. Over remaining districts in the West low temperatures continue, while over the eastern half of the country they are only moderately lower. Rain is probable Tuesday and Wednesday in the East Gulf States, extending Tuesday night and Wednesday into the South Atlantic States, and on Wednesday into the Middle Atlantic States and Southern New England. Possibly snow in New York and Southern New England.

Snow is also probable Wednesday in the Upper Ohio Valley and eastern lower lake region and Tuesday night or Wednesday in the north upper lake region. In the Lower Ohio Valley, the western lower lake region, and southern upper lake region the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

It will be cold Wednesday in the Lower Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States.

Winds for Tuesday and Wednesday along the North and Middle Atlantic States will be fresh northwest, with fair weather; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate variable, except northeast and east on the Florida Coast, fair Tuesday, probably rain Wednesday.

FORECASTS TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday, snow north, snow or rain south portion.

Southern New England—Fair Tuesday, snow or rain Wednesday or Wednesday night.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday, rain or snow in the north, rain in the south portion.

Western New York—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday, cloudy, probably local snows.

Northern New England—Generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

1917.		1918.		1917.	1918.
3 A. M.	24	31	4 P. M.	29	43
6 A. M.	21	31	6 P. M.	26	40
9 A. M.	21	34	8 P. M.	22	38
12 M.	41	41	10 P. M.	22	38

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 35; for the corresponding date last year it was 25; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 40.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 34; at 8 P. M. it was 39. Maximum temperature, 46 degrees at 12:50 P. M.; minimum, 31 degrees at 7:35 A. M. Humidity, 66 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 38 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.84 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.91 inches.

Education Notes.

The Board of Representatives of the High School Teachers' Association will meet this afternoon at 4:15 in the Assembly Room of the Merchants' Association. Woolworth Building, to discuss the development of the salary campaign and to take action regarding the Junior High School and other problems connected with new schedules. There is a strong feeling among many of the high schools that if the elementary school teachers expect other groups to unite with them in their demand for a $660 increase, they should be willing to work for the same raise for high school teachers, on whom the increased cost of living has fallen most heavily. Since the average maximum salary of high school teachers in the United States is $500 higher than the average elementary school maximum, the high school teachers feel that it is only just and reasonable to expect that any scientific revision of schedules will show that same difference.

A class in Scenic Design and Stage Setting has been organized in the New York Evening School of Industrial Art, 204 East Forty-second Street, for men and women. Art students and workers in the art industries are eligible for admission. This course will work in close conjunction with the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the New York Public Library, the various theatrical and dramatic organizations and historical and other similar societies of the city. The class will begin its sessions on Dec. 2, and applicants may register Nov. 26 and 27, between 7 and 9:30 P. M. Applicants should bring samples of their work to the Principal, George K. Gombarts.

Assistant Superintendent Tildsley has asked the first assistants in high schools to report to him those teachers who are doing work of special merit.

President Somers of the Board of Education will preside at the opening lecture of the Brooklyn Teachers' Association series this evening at the Brooklyn Training School for Teachers, Park Place, near Nostrand Avenue. The speaker of the evening will be Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, who has recently returned from active service with the American Red Cross. These lectures, which take place every Tuesday at 8 P. M., are given in cooperation with the National Security League. Among the speakers who will address future meetings are: John R. Rathom, editor of The Providence Journal; President John Grier Hibbon, Dr. Henry van Dyke, Alfred Noyes, Dr. Robert M. McElroy, Dean McClenahan, Job E. Hedges, Thomas W. Churchill, Dr. Lansing and others.

A conference of teachers will be held in the auditorium of the Merchants' Association on next Friday and Saturday to discuss plans for aiding the new division of the United Employment Service, in finding work for boys and girls who have been graduated from the public schools.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University will address the Teachers' Loyalty League of the Bronx at the Thanksgiving Victory Meeting to be held in the auditorium of the Morris High School, Boston Road and 166th Street, today, at 3:30 P. M. The address will be preceded by community singing of patriotic songs by 1,500 teachers. This will be the first great victory meeting of the teachers of New York City, and Dr. Butler will probably outline the importance of the public schools in the great work of reconstruction and Americanization that must follow the war.

MRS. PRATT TESTIFIES.

Says Husband Told Her That She Was Out of Harmony.

Mrs. Katherine Sloan Pratt, who is suing before Supreme Court Justice Davis for a divorce from Albert Houghton Pratt, testified yesterday that she turned to crystal-gazing and kindred pursuits in an effort to break the influence held over her husband by Mme. F. Mildred Parma, novelist and mystic, who is named as corespondent. She said her husband told her she was not properly in harmony with him, and she spent an hour a day for a month at crystal-gazing but was unable to penetrate the occult group of which her husband and Mme. Parma were members, occupying a bungalow at Atlantic City. Witnesses testified to occurrences at the bungalow to support Mrs. Pratt's charges against her husband and Mme. Parma. The case will continue today.

HURRY CALL SENT TO WHITMAN MEN

Republican Executive Committee Will Meet at Headquarters Today.

MAY CALL LEGISLATURE

Meanwhile Governor's Lawyers Get Orders for Review of Void and Defective Ballots.

In response to a hurried summons, the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee will meet at the party headquarters in West Thirty-ninth Street at noon today. Congressman Bertrand H. Snell of St. Lawrence, Executive Chairman, who came over from Washington to preside at the meeting, professed to have very little information regarding the purpose of the gathering. George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, who issued the call, on the other hand, said that questions growing out of the pending court proceedings to give Governor Whitman access to the ballot boxes would come up for consideration.

Governor Whitman is in town, and, it was said last night, may attend the meeting today. No one would be much surprised if the meeting should result in a letter being addressed to the Governor by the committee, urging him to call an extra session of the Legislature. In this instance a letter would save Governor Whitman the embarrassment of exercising on his own initiative important functions of the Governor's office to further a cause in which he has a personal interest.

That the Executive Committee will be asked at its meeting today to give party sanction and provide financial backing from party funds for the costly proceedings that are in contemplation is regarded as more than likely by well-informed Republicans. Governor Whitman was asked yesterday at the St. Regis what truth there was in a report that he was ready to quit and concede the election of Alfred E. Smith. Mr. Whitman said he had no statement to make.

Counsel representing Governor Whitman appeared yesterday before Justices of the Supreme Court in all the five counties in this city to make arguments in support of an order to show cause why the void, defective, protested, and blank ballots should be brought into court for judicial review before the final report of the canvass is made to the Secretary of State. Justice Philbin in New York, Justice Manning in Kings, and Justice Callaghan in Queens reserved decision. Justice Giegerich, sitting in Bronx, granted the order, as did Justice Fawcett, sitting in Richmond. Justice Fawcett, moreover, ordered the canvass stayed until after the void and defective ballots in Richmond had been examined.

Abram I. Elkus, representing Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith, however, went before Presiding Justice Almet F. Jenks of the Appellate Division in Brooklyn, filed notice of an appeal, and secured a restraining order against any action in Richmond until after the appeal has been decided. Argument on this will be made today.

CARNEGIE 83 YEARS OLD.

Receives Congratulations from T. A. Edison and C. M. Schwab.

Andrew Carnegie celebrated his eighty-third birthday and the arrival of peace yesterday at his home in Fifth Avenue at Ninety-first Street. Mr. Carnegie spent the day quietly, automobiling for two hours in the morning and entertaining a few friends and relatives at luncheon. Most of the day he spent at home. Although it was said he is in good health, his physicians have urged him to conserve his strength in order that he may realize his ambition to live a hundred years.

Mr. Carnegie received many telegrams and messages of congratulation from old friends and associates. Among those who sent messages were Thomas A. Edison and Charles M. Schwab. Mr. Edison telegraphed that he expected to call on the day Mr. Carnegie was 85 years old.

The re-establishment of peace made Mr. Carnegie especially happy on his birthday. Before the war started he gave many millions of dollars to the furtherance of world peace. He gave $1,500,000 for the erection of the Peace Palace at The Hague, and in 1910 established a fund of $10,000,000 to maintain the peace of the world.

HOLDUP MEN ROB FUR STORE OF $3,000

Three Invaders Beat the Lone Clerk and Escape with Booty.

AUTO AIDS THEIR FLIGHT

Clerk Wounded by Chance Shot in a Fight with Daylight Thieves.

Three men armed with revolvers entered the fur store of A. A. Pines & Co., 29 West Twenty-sixth Street, yesterday morning, and after beating and shooting Roma Pines, the clerk, escaped with furs valued at $3,000 to $5,000. Pines had just entered the store yesterday morning and was hanging up his coat, when the armed men entered. Thinking they were customers, he greeted them pleasantly, and in reply was told to hold up his hands. Although two of the men were pointing revolvers at him, he rushed at the third, and did not let go of him until the others beat him off. In the scuffle a revolver was discharged and Pine was wounded in the right leg. The robbers, alarmed at the shot, picked up some blue fox skins, ran to the automobile which was waiting in front of the store, and, starting toward Broadway, were soon lost in the crowd.

Pines was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where it was found that his wounds were not serious. He is 28 years old, is a nephew of the proprietor of the shop, and lives at 1,424 Forty-third Street, Brooklyn.

Another clerk in a fur store, Lena Horowitz, 18 years old, of 485 Ashford Street, Brooklyn, was robbed of $100 yesterday afternoon as she was ascending the stairs of the elevated structure at West Broadway and Grand Streets. She had been sent to the bank by her father, Frank Horowitz, a furrier, of Bleecker and Mercer Streets, and had been followed after she left the bank by a boy, who gave his name as Hyman Harcup, 15 years old, of 119 Floyd Street, Brooklyn. The girl said that the boy grabbed the money from her hand. Patrolman John Bennett of the Macdougal Street Station heard the girl's cries and arrested a boy whom he saw running down the street. Harcup later confessed that he had taken the money.

COLLECTOR KEITH RESIGNS.

Gives Up Place in Revenue Service to Practice Law.

Harry P. Keith, Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of New York, which includes Brooklyn, Long Island, and Richmond County, announced yesterday that he had sent his resignation to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. Mr. Keith in his letter to Secretary McAdoo said that it was necessary, in justice to his family, to resume the practice of law. Mr. Keith denied yesterday that there had been any friction between himself and Treasury officials. He said he would be associated with ex-Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy.

Bertram Gardner, who has been Chief Deputy in Mr. Keith's office, was yesterday named Acting Collector, and shortly will be appointed Collector of the First Internal Revenue District by President Wilson, according to Mr. Keith.

SHAW-WALKER folders always stand stiff and upright in the file, for they're cut with the long grain of the stock running from top to bottom of folder.

ORDINARY correspondence folders bend and sag like this. Why? Because made of short fibered stock, cut the wrong way of the grain.

Look Inside Your Letter Files

ARE they indexed so simply that you know exactly where to find any letter—yourself?

Are the guides readable and clean—or broken and "dog-eared"? Do the folders stand stiffly up in the drawers—or sag and bend under the weight of correspondence?

Are your files neat—carefully kept? Does your file clerk put away letters with the same care that your cashier uses in putting away your money?

If not, Shaw-Walker can—first, supply you out of stock an index that is just right for your needs. Shaw-Walker systems are standardized and are so simple that you need no experts to install them or to explain them.

Second, Shaw-Walker can give you guides, folders, indexes and cards that are different. Different in materials, workmanship, service. Right in design and style.

Furthermore, Shaw-Walker can supply you with a file clerk who will keep your files supremely accurate and neat, a file clerk who knows filing from the ground up—the basic principles, the short cuts, all the fine points.

Or, for slight expense, we will train one of your own file clerks to 100 per cent filing efficiency.

Phone or write for full information.

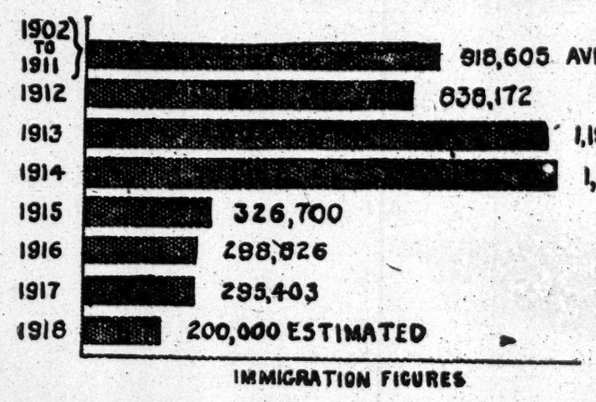
No Standing Room For a Pessimist

The Priorities Division of the War Industries Board is to be congratulated upon its quick action in removing (effective on November 22) all restrictions affecting general business.

Are you now organized or are you preparing to organize the personnel of your enterprise so that you can secure your share of the volume of business that will be transacted in the United States during 1919?

There is no doubt that all of the labor available throughout the United States will be employed at good wages. This automatically stabilizes business.

The chart below speaks for itself and shows how materially immigration increased our labor supply from 1902 to 1914. It also brings out forcibly the yearly loss to our labor supply that we have had to contend with since 1914, and it is reasonable to suppose that no European country for some years will permit any large amount of emigration.



IMMIGRATION FIGURES

We still have some four million men in the service of the Army and Navy, for whom we must produce food and clothing. Unquestionably, it will be a long period of time before more than two and a half million of these men will be released to resume productive occupations.

The quantity of food and other supplies which we furnished the European countries prior to 1914 was small compared with what it is now our duty to provide.

A great big volume of business will be transacted throughout the United States during 1919 and the years to come. To take care of this we are confident that labor will quickly return to peace-time occupations and that there will be an extensive use of modern machinery in every line of endeavor.
